Rain to dampen area travel plans

Northwest suburban residents planning an outing this weekend better bring along umbrellas.

Thunderstorms and cooler weather will be ushered into the area tonight from Wisconsin and rain is expected to stay in the area through Sunday. Saturday temperatures will be in the 70s. Cool weather is forecast for Sunday, but Southern Illinois will enjoy pleasant weather.

Father's Day will be cool and cloudy.

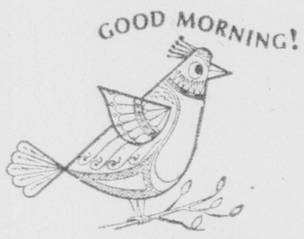

Area residents driving north will find lane restrictions on the Tri-State Tollway in each direction between Willow Road and Stearn School Road.

To the south, road construction will continue to keep lanes closed on the Stevenson Expressway and motorists are ugred to seek an alternate route.

Utility tax likely to be banished

by BILL HILL
A news anaylsis

Several Arlington Heights trustees continue to favor repealing the village's controversial 5 per cent utility tax, despite warnings from administrative officials that the tax may be needed in future years to pay for general operations in the village.

Indications from trustees are that the tax will be repealed by the end of the year when all projects it now funds are paid.

But the utility tax or some comparable revenue source is going to be needed in the immediate future to balance the village's general operating budget, Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson told the fiscal policy planning committee this week.

THE UTILITY TAX, which costs an average homeowner about $75 a year, nets the village approximately $1.5 million annually, Finance Director Kenneth Bonder said.

To use utility tax revenue for general operations would be a policy change in Arlington Heightc. Since levied in 1970, the utility tax always has been used for specific projects, such as water wells, reservoirs, sewers and public buildings.

The utility tax became highly controversial in 1975 when it was extended 10 months to finance the new public works garage.

Many cities use the utility tax to provide general operating revenue and some with home-rule powers have a utility tax as high as 7 per cent, Bonder said.

BUT TRUSTEES contacted Thursday said the utility tax was intended to fund only specific projects and they favor its repeal.

"It seems to me we should decide what is needed and then find a way to pay for it. We need to decide our philosophy on who is going to benefit by services and who is going to pay for them," Trustee Madeline Schroeder said.

Projects that serve future residents should not be paid off quickly by present residents, she said. "The people who use services should participate in paying for them," she said.

Trustees Frank Palmatier and Alfred Barboro said they had not decided if they will vote to repeal the utility tax, but Village Pres. James

S. Africa riots worst in 16 years

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Black rioters, enraged by police shoooting school children, burned and looted the black enclave of Soweto Thursday then ransacked another black township, setting fire to shops. Police reinforcements moved in armored cars to crush the worst violence in South Africa in 16 years.

Police said at least 32 persons were killed in two days of rioting sparked by police firing into a crowd of demonstrating schoolchildren. Another 250 persons were wounded, 69 of them with bullets, police said.

A day of rioting in Soweto, a black enclave of one million inhabitants, moved to Kagiso township, about 20 miles West of Johannesburg near Krugersdorp, police said.

A contingent of police reinforcements rushed to the area where rampaging blacks set fire to shops and beer halls and began smashing windows and looting other stores.

The violence was the worst in South Africa since 1960 when police killed 69 black rioters in one afternoon in Sharpeville.

In Johannesburg, motorcycle gangs of whites rode into a peaceful protest march by whites and blacks and scattered them with "chains, broken bottles and clubs," according to witnesses.

The march to city hall by a group of about 1,000 white students of the University of the Witwatersrand and black supporters was to protest police action in Soweto in opening fire into a crowd of demonstrating black school-

It's a bird, it's a plane, it's a-service station? Yessir

WINGED WONDER of a service station is part of a book and display on Chicago architecture. The station, Rand and Elmhurst roads in Mount Prospect, was designed by Laurence Booth and has been the recipient of awards since its construction in 1972.

by JOE SWICKARD

Architects want their buildings and designs to make statements: essays in brick and steel; form and function in a usable, enduring art form.

But does architect Laurence Booth's Arco service station, Elmhurst and Rand roads in Mount Prospect, say fill 'er up to you?

The service station is part of the raging battle between the champions of interpretations of what is the "Chicago School" of architecture.

THE SERVICE STATION is part of a display and book, "Chicago Architects," that was put together by a group of Chicago architects who are out to prove Chicago has more to offer than just Mies van der Rohe's stark girder-and-panel skyscrapers. The display is now featured in the Chicago Time-Life Building.

The station, built in 1972, was honored that year with a Distinguished Building Award given by the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

What has been described as a building "which squats like a giant prehistoric bird in Mount Prospect," is now "enhanced" with fluttering pennants, and signs crying "Gas For Less" and "Under New Management."

But what of those who are pumping gas and wiping windows in a work of art?

"I KNEW IT was unusual, but I never thought it was an architect's dream," said Debbie Lange, a gas station attendant there.

Today

The station challenges description with its three decks sweeping over pumping islands that are incorporated into the supports. At the core is a glass-enclosed cylinder for the office.

"It's different, that's for sure," said manger Joe Kornacker, who took over the station with a partner about two months ago.

Booth said the design "was an exploration of the gas station of the future, but more than that. The whole commercial strip concept should be low-key, more human."

HE SAID the station was an attempt to market goods in a manner free of the "aggressiveness" of neon signs.

"Is there a better way to do it? One more compatible with the natural surroundings?" he asked.

The station was a statement of "restraining greed" while "trying

Pikarsky refutes suburban charges

by LYNN ASINOF

The Regional Transportation Authority's embattled chairman Milton Pikarsky Thursday issued a 300-page document refuting charges by suburban board members that he has mismanaged the six-county agency.

The report is Pikarsky's answer to a 20-page "bill of particulars" issued by suburban directors last week. The chairman argues each point in the "bill of particulars," providing extensive documentation for each argument.

"This report fully responds to the allegations and should clear the air so that the board and staff of the RTA can concentrate on fulfilling the legislative mandate and responsibility of the Regional Transportation Authority to the public," Pikarsky said.

The four suburban directors have threatened to block passage of the budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1 unless Pikarsky resigns. They maintain that Pikarsky is an inept administrator, a liar and unfair to the suburbs.

"In developing a new agency of government, some differences of opinion are bound to arise," Pikarsky said. "Perhaps the greatest difficulty facing the board has been the exploitation of a so-called city-suburban split."

In answer to charges that he failed to develop proper personnel guidelines, Pikarsky argued that informal guidelines were developed because the agency still had a limited number of employes.

The chairman also said the suburban board members are blaming him for matters beyond his control.

Paul Sheetz, 1701 Greenleaf Ave., was in stable condition in the intensive-care unit of Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge, Thursday night after his right forearm was saved in surgery. Sheetz was in shock and could not give police further information before being taken to the hospital by Des Plaines firefighters.

Ford, aides ponder airlift of Americans in Beirut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford Thursday got a "thorough review" of the situation in Lebanon during a 90-minute meeting with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and other senior officials, the White House announced.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen would give no hint whether the United States had decided to evacuate 1,400 Americans from the Beirut area.

"President Ford received a thorough review of the situation in Lebanon. He was brought up to date," Nessen told newsmen.

Kissinger, smiling at newsmen, left the White House without saying anything.

Nessen said he planned nothing further, but he appeared to leave open the possibility the White House might announce evacuation of Americans Friday.

Ambassador L. Dean Brown, President Ford's special envoy, was leaving Thursday night for Damascus, Syria, to pick up the bodies of Ambassador Francis Meloy and his economic counselor, Robert O. Waring. They and their chauffeur were slain Wednesday in Beirut.

Ford had summoned top national security officials to the White House to discuss evacuation in Beirut. Kissinger earlier told the House International Relations Committee, "If U.S. personnel are used, it will be a very short operation" and "we will, of course, consult with Congress."

There was speculation Ford faced several options including:

• Thin down the embassy staff of 53 personnel and encourage non-Americans to leave.

• Order an evacuation, flying out evacuees either from Beirut airport or Damascus by commercial aircraft.

• Order a military-style evacuation, using helicopters and ships of the 6th Fleet.

In Beirut, meantime, the Palestine Liberation Organization said three Lebanese gunmen had confessed to the murder of U.S. Ambassador Francis Meloy Jr., his economic counselor and their chauffeur. It said the slayings were "part of a plot" and the killers were "working for someone else."

A PLO spokesman told a news conference that three Lebanese gunmen arrested by Palestinian security agents confessed to the slaying of Meloy, economic counselor Robert O. Waring and the Lebanese chauffeur-bodyguard Zuheir Moghrabi in a Moslem sector of Beirut.

The spokesman said the three were still being interrogated because, "It has become clear their crime was part of a plot."

"Theirs was not an isolated act," the PLO spokesman said. "They were working for somebody else. We are still trying to find out who."

The bodies, wrapped in bloodied carpets and dumped from a speeding car on a coastal road in western Beirut Wednesday afternoon, were still at the American University of Beirut hospital. They had been taken there for identification by the Red Cross patrol who found them.

An embassy spokesman refused to say when or how the American bodies would be returned to the United States, but reliable sources said they may be moved early Friday morning. Both Meloy and Waring were from Washington, D.C.

The PLO spokesman identified the accused assassins only as "Lebanese nationals."

THE BEER STRIKE may be over in St. Louis, but the beer-truck drivers strike continues to heat up. Violence flared Thursday as strikers from Grey Eagle beer distributing company forced non-union beer trucks off the road. Police were on the scene in minutes, preventing any major violence. Ambulance attendants prepare to take one of the strikers to a hospital after he was injured in an auto accident trying to force a truck off the road. Another area had a similar incident.

Serious crime in U.S. rises 4 per cent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There were fewer murders around the United States in the first three months of this year compared with last year, but New York City was still at the top of list for the crime, the FBI reported Thursday.

Serious crime in the United States rose 4 per cent in the first quarter of 1976 but crimes of violence fell 7 per cent with murder taking a big drop of 11 per cent, the FBI said.

The 4 per cent increase represented a slackening from the 18 per cent increase during the first three months of 1975 from the same quarter in 1974, but FBI Director Clarence Kelley said the increase was still a "serious problem."

Spokesmen for the FBI and the Justice Department said there was no immediate explanation for the slackening.

"The continued rise in reported crime remains a serious problem for the criminal justice system and the nation," Kelley said, noting serious crime was 9 per cent higher in 1975 than 1974.

Kelley made the 1976 first-quarter figures public in an FBI Uniform Crime Report, based on statistics from 69 city, county and state law enforcement agencies.

Seven "serious" crimes constitute the Crime Index — the "violent" crimes of murder, forcible rape, robbery and aggravated assault; and the "property" crimes of burglary, larceny-theft and motor vehicle theft.

Taken together, the violent and property crimes rose 4 per cent in the first quarter of 1976.

But the "violent" crimes fell 7 per cent in the first quarter of this year from 1975, the report said. The only violent crime to increase was rape, 1 per cent, but murder fell 11 per cent, robbery 10 per cent and aggravated assault 3 per cent, it said.

While the first-quarter murder rate fell overall, Detroit had 154 murders compard to 123 in 1975. New York fell from 395 to 338, and Philadelphia, from 113 to 85.

Among Illinois' three major cities, only Rockford experienced an overall increase in the number of serious crimes committed in the period.

The total number of serious crimes went down in Chicago and Peoria for the period, but all three cities had significant rises in the number of larceny-thefts committed. Police said the new craze for stealing CB radios was to blame.

The number of major crimes went up in all but two categories in Rockford. There were five forcible rapes in the early part of both years.

Armed robberies, however, decreased from 101 to 55, and Rockford Police Chief Delbert Peterson attributed the improvement to the arrest of armed robbery gang members in northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin.

Peterson said CB radios were responsible for the larceny-theft increase — from 1,070 to 1,346.

"They're a big headache," he said. "We have four or five reports a day. We're working on special plans to use decoys in the city's hospital and other parking lots to increase the number of arrests."

He attributed other crime increases to a "disregard for property and life."

In Chicago the total crime index went down 5 per cent for the first three months of 1976, from 52,564 crimes reported to 49,540. The city also showed decreases in all serious categories except murder and larceny theft.

Chicago Police Department spokesman David Mozee said the Wincrest Nursing Home fire was responsible for the rise in murders for the period — from 210 in the first quarter of 1975 to 234 in the same thee months of 1976. The Jan. 30 fire claimed 25 lives.

On larceny theft, Mozee said, CB radio theft accounted for most of the increase.

Peoria's total crime index went down 6 per cent — from 2,740 to 2,553, but the larceny-theft increased 17 per cent, from 1,257 to 1,524.

"Reports of CB radio thefts have been doubling every year and last year accounted for half the total number of thefts," Police Superintendent Alan Andrews said.

Agents seize $39 million in cocaine

Customs agents made the most valuable cocaine haul in the service's history Thursday when they seized $39-million worth of the drug which they watched being unloaded from a Liberian freighter. The "six or eight" smugglers escaped on foot when agents approached them on the dock. They took the cocaine — packed in seven garbage bags and weighing 169 pounds — with them, but discarded the bags during the course of their flight. Officials said they understood the cocaine was destined for New York City, but would not say where they got that information.

Bright haze obscures Mars surface

Jet Propulsion Laboratory scientists Thursday displayed the first close-up pictures of Mars taken from Viking 1, and said they were puzzled by a bright haze that obscured details of the planet's surface. But the scientific team at a JPL news conference said the haze was believed consistent with earlier observations and the highly reflective haze may indicate an extremely thin cloud layer. Viking 1 is scheduled to go into Mars orbit Saturday afternoon and put down its lander July 4.

Report Frank Fitzsimmons subpoenaed

Labor Department officials confirmed Thursday that Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons and other union officials have been subpoenaed in an investigation of alleged corruption of a union pension fund. Fitzsimmons disclosed the subpoenas Thursday in a speech denouncing the grand jury system and government investigations which he claimed were harassing his union. Fitzsimmons did not say what agency had issued the subpoenas and he refused to answer questions on the subject.

Letter bomb defused in Houston

The wife of an Exxon Oil Co. officer discovered a manila-envelope bomb in her mailbox Thursday, and a police bomb squad defused it. The explosive device, which was constructed in a 9-by-12-inch manila envelope and postmarked Texarkana, Tex., June 11, was the second discovered this week in Houston. It appeared to be one of more than a dozen mailed from the Northeast Texas area to corporate executives in this country, said John T. Riley, assistant special agent in charge of the Houston FBI office.

Court rules on 'Miranda' warnings

The Supreme Court ruled Thursday that prosecutors cannot use the fact that a defendant remained silent when arrested to imply that an alibi used at his trial is a lie. The 6-3 ruling bars prosecutors from questioning a defendant on the stand about why he remained silent when questioned by police rather than provide the excuse he is attempting to use as a defense at trial. Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., writing for the majority, said when a defendant is given his "miranda" warnings, including that he has a right to remain silent, he has a reasonable expectation that taking advantage of the right won't be used against him when he goes to trial.

Pugil stick Marine tells of fight

A former Marine recruit said Thursday he was driven by determination to prove himself as a fighting man when he put "everything I had" into the pugil stick blow that sent another recruit into a coma that ended in death. "He hit me in the head and that brought on a rush of adrenalin," Robert Evans of Myrtle Point, Ore., testified about the final moments of his bout with Pvt. Lynn E. McClure, 20, of Lufkin, Tex., Dec. 6. "He turned around and started to run, and I ran around the front of him. I hit him in the right side of the head, and he went down and he looked like he was having some kind of seizure." Evans testified in the general court martial of the drill instructor of the bout, S. Sgt. Harold Bronson, 30, of Freeport, Fla.

Fires burned out of control in Soweto, a black "township" of one million inhabitants. Black smoke curled over the area and police said the rioters embarked on a "pillage" of stores and had burned administration offices.

Police reinforcements in armored cars and circling air force helicopters sprayed tear gas on the mobs but a strong wind nullified its effect and it failed to quell the arson and looting police said.

Police said they repulsed one attack by rockthrowing and knife-swinging demonstrators who attempted to storm the Baragwanath hospital for blacks on the outskirts of Soweto.

Scores of buildings were gutted and at least 40 trucks overturned and burned. Transport services were suspended and police cordoned off the entire area.

South African army units stationed three miles from Soweto were placed on alert. About 1,200 black and white police were inside the enclave trying to restore order.

Soweto police chief Col. Johan Greber warned whites to stay clear of the area. Scores of roadblocks were erected. Whites in separate southern suburbs a few miles from Soweto were warned to stay at home. More than 125 blacks were arrested.

He said 11 policemen were injured and three were hospitalized.

Post offices throughout the area were closed and at least one was gutted. Bus services which carry thousands of black commuters to Johannesburg daily, were stopped.

Mercenaries called 'society scum'

LUANDA, Angola (UPI) — The prosecution Thursday called 13 American and British mercenaries the "scum of human society" and demanded the death penalty for all. Spectators burst into applause and shouted "Death, death!"

"It is not our job to give graduated punishment here," Prosecutor Rui Montiero said in closing arguments. "For their grave crimes against the Angolan people, they can only be punished through death by shooting."

As Monteiro ended his three-hour and 20-minute closing statement, the spectators in the brightly lit courtroom burst into sustained applause interspersed with shouts of "death, death."

The defendants glanced nervously at each other in the dock as they heard the words and broke into agitated exchanges among themselves.

The bearded prosecutor repeated his death demand as he wrapped up his case with a long tirade against the West and accusations that the U.S. government bankrolled the opponents of the victorious Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola in the former Portuguese colony's civil war.

Monteiro singled out California Gary Acker and Argentine-American Gustavo Grillo as two defendants who should be shown no leniency. The faces of both men, who had thought they might get off lighter than others on trial, dropped as they heard Monteiro mention their names even before he referred to Costas "Col. Tony Callan" Georghiou, accused of murdering several of his mercenary comrades.

Monteiro scoffed at the defense put forward by 21-year-old Acker, from Sacramento, Calif. He said Acker's claims he had been in Angola for only three days without firing a shot before capture and that he suffered from mental problems were "a parody."

The claim by 25-year-old Grillo that he was converted to socialism during his five months of captivity received equal treatment.

"He put his intelligence to the help of his defense, but he is one of the most military competent of them all," Monteiro said.

He did not mention by name the third American, Daniel Gearhart, a 34-year-old Vietnam veteran with a wife and four children in Kensington, Md.

Monteiro called the defendants the "scum of human society." He said they were "illegal" fighters but said the involvement of Cuban troops, who fought alongside Popular Movement forces, was "inter-nationalism."

Illinois Corrections Director Allyn R. Sielaff, newly named head of Wisconsin's Division of Correction, said Thursday he will begin his new job Aug. 1 or Sept. 1. Sielaff, 44, said he accepted the job last Saturday and informed the governor's office of his decision Monday. Gov. Daniel Walker was defeated in a bid for renomination in the March 16 primary and leaves office in January. Cabinet members almost always leave office with the governor who appointed them.

Sielaff, 44, has been director of Illinois corrections since June 1973. He said Wisconsin officials wrote him earlier this year and asked if he would be interested in applying for a job there. He will be paid $41,904 a year in his new post.

Cop charged in sex case

A 10-year Bloomington police force veteran was arrested Tuesday on charges he took indecent liberties with a 5-year-old girl, contributing to the sexual delinquency of a child. The policeman, John W. Stevens, was named in one of 11 suppressed indictments that a McLean County grand jury returned earlier in the day. Bloomington Police Chief Harold Bosshardt suspended Stevens two weeks ago for conduct unbecoming to a police officer in connection with the alleged incident.

Panel OKs public aid budget

The Illinois Senate Appropriations Committee Thursday approved a $1.98 billion fiscal 1977 budget for the Dept. of Public Aid, leaving it virtually in the form it was passed in the House. TheT bill (H3475) was sent to the Senate floor by an 11-8 vote after the committee defeated a Republican attempt to cut $660,000 allocated in the budget request for 88 new job positions.

1 dead, 1 wounded in 'L' train shooting

A brother, acting as a bodyguard, was shot and killed and his sister gravely wounded Thursday by a gunman who fired from close range inside the lead car of a moving elevated train crammed with at least 100 rush hour commuters. The assailant, gun still in hand, leaped off the train onto the platform of the 35th Street station on Chicago's South Side and fled down stairs to the street. Police, summoned by conductor Hartford Archie's frantic train phone message,just missed the guman.

A helicopter, dogs and squads of police were pressed into the search for the gunman. Charles Turner, 36, Chicago, died on an operating table at Michael Reese Hospital about three hours after he was shot in the chest and right arm. His sister, Rose Marie Turner, 21, was reported in grave condition from wounds in her head and right thigh.

Judge may cut Wigoda's term

U. S. District Court Judge Abraham L. Marovitz criticized the federal parole board Thursday for ignoring its own guidelines in the case of former Ald. Paul T. Wigoda, and indicated he may reduce Wigoda's sentence. Wigoda entered federal prison in Lexington, Ky., Jan. 9 after being convicted in 1974 of filing a false income tax return by not reporting a $50,000 zoning payoff. He was sentenced to one year and a day in prison by Marovitz, and became eligible for parole in April. However, the board denied Wigoda a parole, saying he did not meet its guidelines for income tax evasion convictions, which call for serving 12 to 16 months in prison.

Cement bribe skim told

A federal prosecutor said Thursday one defendant in the cement bribery trial skimmed $10,000 of the top of a $30,000 payoff fund without telling his colleagues about it. Assistant U.S. Atty. James Holderman said in his closing argument that defendant Peter V. Pappas kept the bulk of the bribe money while misleading both the cement industry, which was making the payoff, and six legislators who benefitted from it. When the cement industry actually made the payoff in the fall of 1972, Holderman said, there was a $900 shortage so that the actual bribe fund totaled only $29,100. Holderman said that Pappas, rather than taking a smaller bribe himself, left State Rep. Robert Craig, D-Danville, holding the short end. Holderman said Craig received only $4,000 rather than the $5,000 he had been promised.

Area asked to uphold ban on sprinkling

Village boards and city councils in the Northwest suburbs will be asked to enforce existing sprinkling ordinances stringently as part of an areawide water conservation program, area public works directors agreed Thursday.

The directors, representing 9 of the 16 members of the Northwest Municipal Conference, agreed to ask for the strict enforcement as an interim step before proposing an areawide sprinkling policy.

Earlier in the week, the directors from four municipal conference communities suggested that all 16 adopt an ordinance limiting sprinkling to certain days and providing a $500 fine for each violation.

William Muhlenfeld, executive director of the conference, said the directors at the meeting Thursday decided to talk about the areawide ordinance again next month after finding out what effect enforcement of present ordinances will have on water use.

In addition to asking communities to enforce existing ordinances, Muhlenfeld said, the directors agreed to ask villages that do not have sprinkling ordinances to adopt them.

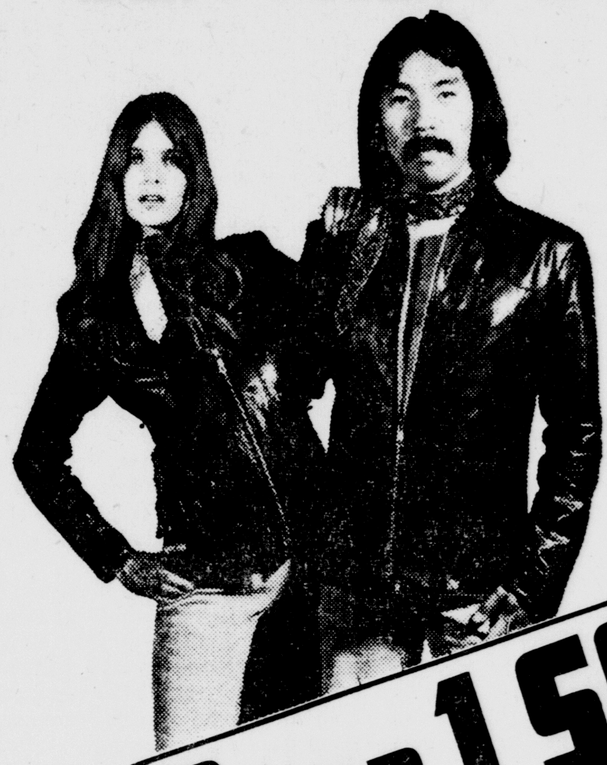

Public works officials have been expressing concern about the need for increasing water conservation since the hot spell that began two weeks ago. Water consumption in the Northwest suburbs has been running above peak levels from last year.

Youth music unit seeks $14,800

Music For Youth, a private parents organization that has sponsored the string music program in Arlington Heights Dist. 25, will request a $14,800 subsidy from the board for the 1976-77 school year.

Ernest M. Templeton, president of the Music For Youth board, said the group will bring the proposal to the board Thursday. "Due to the financial problems facing the school board, we have little hope of reinstatement in the school district or of receiving any funding help this year," Templeton said.

The organization is projecting a $27,000 budget for the 1976-77 school year, including $9,000 in revenue from parent donations, $1,300 from the annual spring concert, a $1,900 balance from this year's budget and the $14,800 subsidy from Dist. 25.

The group estimated expenses as $26,000 in music teachers' salaries, $250 for postage, $500 for printing and $250 in miscellaneous costs.

MUSIC FOR YOUTH was formed in 1971 when the Dist. 25 board voted to drop its music program after failing to pass a tax rate increase referendum in 1970. The program has operated in Dist. 25 elementary and junior high schools with the help of a yearly subsidy from the district.

Last spring the group requested $10,000 subsidy from Dist. 25 and received $5,500, Templeton said.

Board Pres. Joan Klussman said Thursday she had not received a copy of the Music For Youth proposal and "I could not predict how the board will react. I can't speak for the rest of the board; we have not discussed it yet."

Music For Youth has between 140 and 145 children in the program, and offers lessons during the school day for groups of three to five children from preschool through junior high.

Larger groups of students also meet weekly after school and orchestra training is available for experienced students.

A STATE chartered not-for-profit organization, the parent gourp cannot charge fees but can ask for donations. A donation, schedule, beginning at $55 per year for one pre-school child to $80 a year for a school-aged child, has been set. Last year the board originally balked at subsidizing the program because 30 per cent of the families did not pay a dination.

Templeton said because of a lack of funds this year, the Music For Youth board was forced to hire three part-time teachers rather than a full-time violin teacher-director.

"This action was successful financially, but caused a a lowering of quality in over-all teaching effectiveness as the part-time teachers were not experienced or certified," Templeton said.

"PARENTS' DONATIONS can only cover half or less than half of the staff budget unless the donations are doubled, causing further strain on supportive parents," he said.

The "ideal solution" would be for the string music program to be reinstated by Dist. 25, but Music For Youth could maintain the program "with sufficient aid from the Board of Education," Templeton said.

Templeton said the group was able to end the year with the surplus of funds because a local music company, which provides instruments for the program, donated some violins, paid the donation for some children whose parents could not afford the program and supplied printing costs. He said when current bills are paid, the group should have about $1,000.

Music For Youth uses the Suzuki method of instruction through which children learn by imitation and repetition. Violin and cello are offered.

Unit hearing data funds OKd for Dist. 59, 214

by JUDY JOBBITT

High School Dist. 214 and Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 may legally spend funds to present evidence at unit school district hearings, according to an opinion from the Illinois Office of Education.

Julia Dempsey, IOE legal advisor, said her opinion clarifies a question concerning the use of school funds for gathering and presenting information related to a unit district petition.

She said the type of expenditures approved by the districts to date in relation to the proposed Dist. 59 area unit district are legal within her interpretation of the law.

The clarification was requested by Cook County Schools' Supt. Richard Martwick's office following an opinion from Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott on June 1.

SCOTT'S OPINION stated a school board "may not expend school district funds to promote or oppose the formation of a unit school district."

William Wallin, chief of the opinion division in Scott's office, said the opinion was "talking about spending funds at the referendum stage — whether a school district could campaign one way or another."

He said the opinion referred to a case in Vermillion County and states that a district cannot use school district funds to promote or oppose a unit district referendum.

Mrs. Dempsey said it is "reasonable" to expect school districts to present information at the unit district hearings that would support or oppose the petition. She said expenditures related to presenting the information would be appropriate.

MRS. DEMPSEY SAID it is "unreasonable" to demand a school district to present evidence without taking a stand on the issue. "If no one from the school district would be allowed to expend funds to present their side, it would be one sided," she said.

Mrs. Dempsey said she believes Scott was "addressing the specific question of influencing the voters" when the issue reached the referendum stage.

She said a school board "almost has a duty to present evidence" at the hearings so all sides can be heard.

She referred to a section in the Illinois School Code that sets the requirements for the unit district petition process. She said for affected school districts to have a "role at a hearing held on a petition proposing formation of a community unit school district" as authorized in the statutes and "to fulfill that role, school district funds may be expended. This has been the long standing practice in Illinois and is the only sensible reading of the statutes."

DIST. 59 SPENT $8,500 to hire a consultant to update information on a unit district for the elementary district's area. The original study conducted in 1973 cost between $18,000 and $20,000 and was used as the base for this year's study.

Dist. 59 also has hired the law firm of Reid, Ochsenschlager, Murphy and Hupp for advice on the hearing procedures that will begin July 8.

Dist. 214 has retained the law firm of Fawell, James and Brooks for advice in opposing the unit district. The board has paid the firm $6,525 said Robert Weber, associate superintendet for business services.

The high school district also hired a court reporter to make transcripts of all unit district study committee meetings and published a special edition of the district's newsletter in March urging the community to oppose the unit district.

THE DIST. 214 board has voted to oppose the unit district. Dist. 59 has not taken formal action to oppose or support the unit district but two board members are on a committee of 10 residents who filed the unit district petitions with the county office.

A Message From GEORGE HARRIS Your Pharmacist

WHEN YOU ARE ILL, you go to your physician because you know he can help you. You answer his important questions, often have a physical examination, and he prescribes a medication.

WE COMPOUND YOUR PRESCRIPTION, you take the medicine, and you get well again. Then do you tell your friends, who seem to have the same illness, to use your prescription?

YOUR PRESCRIPTION was written for you after a careful study of your particular trouble. Many different ailments have symptoms that look the same to you. Only a physician can correctly judge them, and it often takes more than one visit to do so.

NEVER GIVE YOUR PRESCRIPTION to a friend or relative without permission from your physician. Advise them to visit their own physician, or yours if they have none of their own.

AND WHEN YOU GIVE them this very sound advice, we would appreciate your mentioning that, since the compounding of prescriptions is our most important duty, we would welcome the privilege of becoming "Their Pharmacist."

Banishment likely for utility tax

Ryan and Trustee David Griffin remain opposed to it.

RYAN SAID HE is committed to abolishing the utility tax.

"It has proved to be an unfair approach to taxation because a disproportionate amount of that tax is paid by single-family homeowners. It is also unfair because it is not deductible," Ryan said.

Village officials have suggested that the utility tax may be needed to cover general operations because of inflation, but also because of plans to build a new police station and additional quarters at Fire Station No. 2.

It also is going to be expensive to get Lake Michigan water out to the area once the allocation is approved, Hanson told the fiscal policy planning committee Wednesday.

"I felt as long as these tax funds were available that we would find projects to use them for," Griffin said. "It's easy to justify a project when you have surplus money around, but I wonder if the taxpayers would approve building a new public safety building if it were put to a referendum."

RYAN ALSO SAID he will oppose extending the utility tax to pay for any new projects.

"I don't see the erection of a public safety building as a rationale for continuing the utility tax. What we need to do is expand our tax base and look for other sources of revenue," he said.

Employe fee seen as industry damper

The $3 employe head tax being proposed by Cook County would provide the Village of Arlington Heights with narly $500,000 annually, but it still is unpopular with many trustees who say it will hamper efforts to attract new industry to the village.

"On a short-term basis, it may be very attractive to politicians, but in the long-term, it could drive business right out of the county. In the long run it won't help us or Cook County at all," said Trustee David Griffin.

The new tax proposed last week by County Board Pres. George W. Dunne will require businesses in the county with 15 or more employes to pay $3 a month for each employe. The only exceptions will be for non-profit businesses.

TRUSTEE Frank Palmatier said that he opposes Dunne's proposal on the principle that taxes should not be imposed unless proven to be necessary.

"It's obvious that this tax would benefit the county and the City of Chicago more than the suburbs. I think it was calculated that way," he said.

Chicago already has such a tax.

Suburbs such as Schaumburg and Elk Grove Village with large industrial areas already have expressed strong opposition to the head tax proposal because the amount returned is calculated on the basis of population, not the amount paid by industry in each village.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS would receive more than $400,000 annually if 1970 census figures are used, even though much less actually would be raised by taxing industry in the village.

Hank Pluster of the village planning department estimated that Arlington Heights industries employ about 3,600 workers, which would mean an annual tax payment to the county of about $130,000.

But the employe head tax would contradict the village's efforts to attract industry to Arlington Heights, Village Pres. James T. Ryan said.

"We're trying to attract industry to broaden our tax base. This tax, in the long run, would only encourage industry to leave the county, just as it has encouraged it to leave the City of Chicago," Ryan said.

Other possible revenue sources discussed briefly Wednesday by the fiscal policy planning committee included a proposal by Cook County to impose an employe head tax on businesses in the county. Approximately $500,000 would be returned to Arlington Heights under the plan, Bonder said.

Other possibilities were: a real estate transfer tax, which would be a tax on real estate sales; a parking tax on Arlington Park Race Track; and a parimutuel tax on the race track.

Pay talks hurt by union: Harper

by DIANE GRANAT

The intervention of a national teachers' union representative in the recent contract negotiations dispute at Harper College "blocked real progress by the faculty and the board for months," the Harper Board of Trustees said in a statement released Thursday.

The board said Norman Swenson of the American Federation of Teachers, a national teachers' union with which the Harper faculty recently affiliated, "injected Chicago-style union politics into what was essentially a local problem."

Negotiations between the board and faculty ended Monday when a tentative, agreement was signed fololwing a five-month court battle.

THE AGREEMENT grants a $1,375 pay raise to most faculty members and extends the board's recognition of the faculty senate as the bargaining agent for the 202 full-time faculty members at Harper.

Swenson, president of the Cook County Colleges Teachers Union, said the board's charges are "completely unfounded."

Michael Bartos, chief faculty negotiator, said Swenson and the AFT did not become involved in contract talks until the board was ordered back to the bargaining table May 20.

"It is certainly unfair to charge the AFT with hindering negotiations," Bartos said

"OUR IMPRESSION is that all of these matters have been settled amicably. Instead of healing wounds, I see the board driving a deeper wedge between the faculty and the board," Bartos said.

The board also said in its statement that it is not bound by the faculty's referendum supporting affiliation with the AFT. "We haven't been put in the position of having to recognize the AFT because an argreemnt was signed with the faculty senate," said Board Chairman Shirley Munson, who presented the board's position Thursday.

Mrs. Munson said the board did not state its position on the contract dispute earlier because board members were threatened with contempot of court citations if they discussed negotiation matters.

Mrs. Munson said the board spent about $20,000 on legal fees "since we were brought into court by the faculty senate and we had no choice but to defend ourselves."

CONTRACT TALKS between the board and faculty began early this year but ended abruptly in April when the board declared negotiations had ended. The board then voted teacher a $1,275 raise and teachers filed suit against the board in an attempt to force them back to the bargaining table.

Bank terminals to operate until high court rules

Electronic banking terminals, under fire as branch banks, can remain in operation while the issue is appealed to the United States Supreme Court.

The decision was handed down by the Federal Appeals Court which found the terminals, operated by the First National Bank of Chicago and the Continental Bank, were branch banks and therefore illegal in Illinois.

The First National Bank has a terminal in the Evergreen Court shopping center in Arlington Heights.

U.S. District Court Judge Hubert F. Will had ruled originally that the terminals did not violate the state ban on brinch banks as long as they did not accept account deposits.

The appeals court, however, found the terminals' other functions, making account withdrawals and checking on balances, also qualified them as branches.

The appeals court said the terminals could continue operating until the Supreme Court issues the final ruling on the matter.

The First National's terminal had been part of its community office program. The offices had been challenged as violations of the branch banking laws, and the bank voluntarily closed them as part of an out of court settlement last month, although the terminals remained in operation.

Proposed for Cook County

Howlett, Thompson rap head tax

by STEVE BROWN

Michael J. Howlett and James R. Thompson, the state's gubernatorial candidates, said Thursday they were opposed to plans to levy a head tax on businesses in Cook County.

Both men indicated their opposition to the plan, proposed by County Board Pres. George Dunne during conversations with reporters after a joint speaking engagement.

"I would hope Pres. Dunne would find some other way to raise revenue. I think we would be better off without it," Howlett said.

Howlett also said he did not plan to discuss the tax proposal with Dunne, adding that he did not believe there would be a voter backlash in the county against him if it is approved.

THERE IS NOTHING that can hurt my campaign," he said. Howlett shrugged off questions about a recent Republican sponsored poll, revealed Tuesday by The Herald, which showed Thompson leading him statewide by 18 percentage points.

Michael J. Howlett

James Thompson

Thompson said he would be against the tax if it hurt business in the county.

"I would hope it would be seriously debated by the county board and I would hope the Democratic majority on the board would consider their proposal carefully before acting," Thompson said.

The pair spoke to the Young Executives Club of Chicago. It was the first time the candidates had appeared before the same group at the same time during the campaign.

BOTH SPOKE about the state's economic condition. Thompson announced he was creating 10 regional commissions to examine the economic climate throughout Illinois. Howlett repeated plans to work with a commission to review state government's fiscal condition.

Howlett mentioned that he believed the Illinois General Assembly might resurrect Gov. Daniel Walker's accelerated tax collection before adjourning June 30. The plan, which gives the state an extra $95 million next year was killed by the legislature recently.

When asked if he had learned of a new move to attempt to implement the tax plan from legislative leaders, Howlett said, "no, I heard it in a hallway in the capitol from a girl with a button that said 'I can type.' "

Thompson deviated from his prepared remarks to renew his challenge to debate Howlett throughout Illinois. After the speeches, the Republican chided Howlett for flatly predicting there would be no tax increases in Illinois in the next two years.

"I don't think it is responsible to make promises about things that one person really does not have any control over," Thompson said.

Illinois House OKs discipline rules

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The Illinois House, trying to handle conflict-of-interest charges agaenst majority leader Gerald Shea, Thursday approved rules governing the way its members are to be disciplined.

The procedures, adopted 126-5, provide that any charge of wrongdoing by three or more members against a colleague would automatically be sent to a six-member Special Investigating Committee made up of House members which would meet in secret to decide if any grounds exist for a full-blown probe.

If the committee finds a basis for further investigation, a 12-member House Select Committee on Discipline would hold public hearings and use courtroom procedures. The lawmaker accused of wrongdoing could hire a lawyer.

If the discipline committee finds fault, it can recommend the accused member be reprimanded, censured or expelled from the House. It can also recommend no punishment.

THEN THE FULL House votes on the committee's recommendations. A three-fifths vote (107 votes) is required to find a member at fault. An effort to expel a member requires 118 votes (two-thirds).

If fewer than three members want to accuse another of impropriety, the accused member may let the charge run its course or he may demand that the charges be debated at once on the House floor.

Shea, D-Riverside, has been accused by Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, of a conflict-of-interest for doing paid legal work for the Illinos State Medical Society and then introducing malpractice bills it wants. Schlickman wants Shea reprimanded.

A six-member panel appointed by House Speaker William Redmond, D-Bensenville, has been meeting behind closed doors all week trying to decide if Schlickman's charges warrant a full investigaton. If it does, the new discipline rules would be used to process Schlickman's reprimand resolution.

Ticket for a life-long job?

Tenure for teachers-has it outlived it's usefullness?

by KATHERINE BOYCE

The year is 1940 in a small town in Southern Illinois. The high school coach, one of the most well respected members of the community, is fired by the board of education.

His crime? The coach, it seems did not purchase his new car from the dealership owned by the president of the board.

The incident occurred just a few years before Illinois adopted a tenure law protecting teachers from firing for such arbitrary reasons.

Teachers are placed on tenure after a two-or three-year probationary period. They can only be dismissed for reasons listed in the tenure statute with the school board supplying evidence.

In the years since its adoption, tenure has consistently provoked arguments over its value to education. It continues to emerge as one of the most controversial laws on the books.

Critics argue that tenure virtually guarantees a teacher a job for life by making it next to impossible to fire him. While the intent of the law was good, opponents say tenure has been abused and today only promotes mediocrity by protecting the lazy, disinterested teacher.

CRITICS FREQUENTLY point to their own occupations, saying they have no such protection and must be accountable to their employers or risk losing their job. Why, they ask, do teachers deserve such a privilege?

One of tenure's more persistent critics is State Rep. Donald Deuster, R-Mundelein, who for several years has unsuccessfully attempted to pass legislation modifying the tenure law.

Deuster said tenure was first used to protect university professors, cloistered behind "the ivy covered walls." These individuals were ill equipped for anything but intellectual pursuits and tenure insured that "they wouldn't be thrown out into the cruel world where they couldn't cope," he said.

Tenure also was intended to prevent abuses at the elementary and secondary education level. Before tenure it was not uncommon for newly elected board members to fire teachers and replace them with their relatives, campaign workers and supporters, said Deuster. And, he said, "if a teacher wouldn't go to bed with a school board member she would be fired and his mistress hired."

During the era of McCarthyism tenure also protected teachers who might be suspect for teaching their students about communism, said Deuster. It also protected the teacher from losing his job "for giving an "F" to the son the bank president."

"There are valid reasons for tenure," said Deuster, but the system has gotten out of hand. "Everybody agrees that tenure has a good purpose but it is not functioning well," he said.

TODAY THERE ARE "so many outstanding, top notch teachers coming out of college," said Deuster, but they cannot find jobs because those jobs are already "locked in" by "unfit, substandard teachers" who were hired when there was a shortage.

If Deuster has his way, administrators will have a method to rid school districts of these teachers through a revision in the tenure law which he plans to introduce in the fall legislative session.

The tenure law now reads that teachers may be dismissed for "incompetency, cruelty, negligence, immorality or other sufficent cause" or if the board of education feels the teacher is not qualified to teach and his dismissal would be in the best interest of the schools.

More to come.

Deuster wants to add one more phrase to the law providing for dismissal for "inferior educational performance." Along with this provision, Deuster is considering re-introducing one of his former bills which would require boards of education to adopt standards for teachers. His proposals also would require the evaluation of teachers annually so that administrators could establish a record of a teacher's performance to back up a school district in a dismissal case.

In the past, Deuster's attempts to change tenure have been strongly opposed by teacher unions. This time, Deuster said he'll "be interested to see if the unions want to defend inferi-educational performance."

What unions probably will question, he said, is who will determine what is inferior performance. Such performance would be determined by those who carry out the other provisions in the law — the board of education, a hearing officer and ultimately the courts, he said.

IT IS THIS LEGAL battle that often ensures when a school district fires a tenured teacher and critics argue that tenure guarantees a teacher a job for life because charges such as "incompetence," and "negligence" are difficult to prove.

David Tomcheck, local representative of the Illinois Education Assn., a statewide teachers' union, does not agree. The problem with tenure is that "everybody has hidden behind it," he said.

The association, which provides legal services for its members, has rarely won a case on the question of fitness to teach, said Tomcheck.

Most cases are won because incorrect procedures were followed to dismiss the tenured teacher. "The old argument that you can't fire a teacher really doesn't hold water," he maintains.

The instances of firings are "relatively infrequent," said Tomcheck, because school officials prefer to "ease people out" through forced resignation or unfavorable transfers in job positions.

School officials don't want to go through the due process procedures for dismissal, said Tomcheck. There is "generally an attitude on the part of management that they're doing a teacher a favor because he would be better off elsewhere," said Tomcheck, who characterizes this attitude as the worst sort of "paternalism."

Richard Zweiback, professional negotiator for many local school boards can understand why school officials are hesitant to enter a long, legal battle dismissing a teacher.

Tenure "has never really been a protection for incompetency," said Zweiback. Teachers can be fired under the tenure law but school boards must realize that "you're talking about thousands of dollars" and that sometimes the "cost makes it prohibitive."

ZWEIBACK ESTIMATES that a school district can spend from $8,000 to $10,000 in legal fees to take a teacher to court. The teacher's legal fees are usually paid by his union. "If there is the slightest chance" that the teacher will improve, he is often retained, Zweiback said.

The problem becomes a vicious circle now that local school districts are declining in enrollment, said Zweiback. A drop in enrollment means the district needs fewer teachers but it also means school districts have less revenue and must cut expenses. As a school district needs to make more and more reductions in teaching staff, it has more trouble justifying the legal expense of firing a tenured teacher.

Tomcheck said he doesn't like the idea that school districts should get rid of older, less proficient teachers replacing them with young teachers at the beginning of the salary schedule. "What was the expectation these people had when they took on this career?" he asked. "They do have a very fundamental right to their careers."

Tomcheck also said he dislikes the argument that teachers are the only employes who have guaranteed job security.

"The majority of employes are covered by tenure, some kind of 'just cause' provision in their contracts or some procedure for dismissal," he said. Any employe who is "covered by a bargaining agreement" has the same protection, he said.

Now that teacher unions have become so powerful, and collective bargaining for public employes soon may become state law, some people are wondering whether tenure is even necessary any more.

"Today's unions in effect do away with the need for tenure," said Zweiback, because unions fight strongly against dismissal of teachers and rigid procedures for dismissal are being written into teachers contracts. "With the evolution of labor-type organizations in the public sector the tenure law has lost its purpose," he said.

Deuster sees the logic of this argument. "If we have collective bargaining, tenure is unnecessary and could be abolished," he said.

Without tenure, said Deuster, every school board would be required "to bargin with big unions. I'm not sure I want to tip the scales that way."

Dismiss teachers who don't do jobs well, some urge

"I think teachers should be just like my husband — if he doesn't perform he loses his job," said Arlington Heights homeowner Dorothy Asplund.

Mrs. Asplund, like many average citizens, has very few good things to say about tenure.

"I think it's terrible," she said. Mrs. Asplund is the mother of five children and has had her share of disagreements with teachers and school administrators. While there are some excellent teachers, the tenure law does protect those who would be better off in another occupation, she said.

Mrs. James Mann, also a resident of Arlington Heights and mother of four, said she agrees totally with Mrs. Asplund. Teachers "have to do their jobs or they shouldn't be there," she said.

WHILE TEACHERS are entitled to some rights "over-all, I don't feel it is a fair law to the public" because it protects poor teachers, said Louis Litrento, a salesman from Waukegan. Teachers "should be able to stand up on their own merits like everyone else."

Tenure leads to poor education, said Kori Curran, homemaker from St. Charles. "It makes it virtually impossible to eliminate those from the teaching profession that aren't qualified," she said.

"If you can't get rid of a bad teacher then the kids can't benefit," said Janet Dahl, a recent graduate of Prospect High School. She said she once had a teacher who stood in front of her class and said bluntly that he hated kids.

Des Plaines student Mike Curran, who is graduating this summer from Maine West High School, said he thinks tenure is good, but admits that his feelings are biased because his sister is a teacher.

HIS CLASSMATE, Jay Decker, sees both good and bad points of tenure. There is a lot of "dead weight" in the teaching profession, he said, and "there are so many young teachers coming out of school who are really on the ball" but can't get jobs.

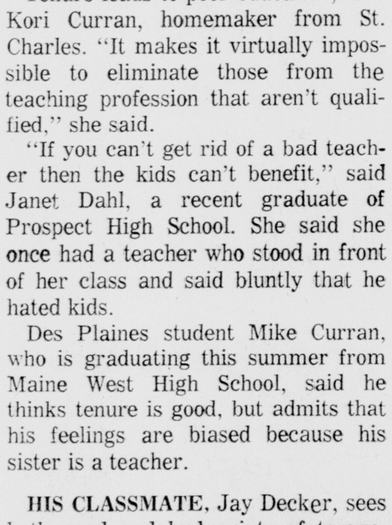

But in a way tenure is good, said Decker. Without it "they'd be kicking out all the teachers who want to teach what they believe."

Spotlight on prestige in convention cities

New York polishes image for a 'Democratic Party'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fiscally-strapped New York City is dressing up in its best bicentennial red, white and blue to host next month's Democratic National Convention in hopes of taking in plenty of green and polishing up its tarnished image.

The city is spending $3.5 million at the modernistic Madison Square Garden in midtown Manhattan just to cover rental, insurance and construction of the podium, seating for the 5,100 delegates and alternates and the press area for the four-day hoopla beginning July 12.

New York also expects to shell out $2.6 million in police overtime, most of which is covered by grants from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, and about $100,000 each in such categories as parking sites for delegate buses and sanitation work.

"Most of the police work will be in security at the Garden and the hotels of the delegates," says Asst. Police Chief Daniel J. Courtenay, who is in charge of security. "We now plan to have about 1,000 men in the area of the Garden."

COURTENAY SAYS much of the overtime cost for the police force will be to control demonstrations. In just one of them, some 130,000 demonstrators are expected in a "Right to Life" march the day before the convention opens. The same day there also will be a large "gay rights" march.

"We are not against anybody making their views known and we don't expect any trouble," Courtenay said. "There have been a lot of groups who have come to us seeking cooperation. We hope to work out mutually agreeable arrangements with all."

While the bverall cost of the convention is expected to hit the $6 million mark — with the federal government picking up $2.82 million of that amount — the 25,000-35,000 visitors are expected to spend $8 million.

That estimate comes from Preston Robert Tisch, president of the Citizens Committee for the Democratic National Convention, who says the money probably will be turned over "roughly three times, so we will come up with a total in the neighborhood of $25 million."

Additionally, the three major television networks will spend "millions of dollars" for convention coverage, according to spokesmen.

The enthusiastic but apolitical Citizen's Committee already has raised $200,000 to polish up the Big Apple, entertain delegates and lecture the locals on what the convention means to the city.

IT HAS ENGAGED an advertising agency and launched an ad campaign: "New York is having a party this summer. A Democratic Party to be exact."

MEMBERS OF A workingmen's party have the floor as preparations begin for the Democratic National Convention in New York's Madison Square Garden, which gets under way July 12. Although fiscally strapped, city is laying out the red, white and blue to host the delegates.

"There will be over 8,000 members of the domestic and foreign press here to cover it," the subway car cards and radio-TV copy reads. "In plain truth it's going to be the biggest thing to happen to the Big Apple in a long, long time."

With the media focus on New York during the convention, the citizen's committee hopes to sell the world on the city and consequently pick up its sagging tourist industry.

Charles Gillett, president of the New York Convention and Visitors Bureau says, "This is by no means the biggest convention of the year — it ranks about seventh or eighth — but the publicity value is 1,000 times more valuable."

The gaudy Times Square area, rife with pimps, prostitutes and porn shops, is being cleaned up. A separate committee of area businessmen has been set up just for that purpose, and they are on the move.

Along with the police, committee members are working to shutter the seedy shops and shift the streetwalkers and flashy procurers to areas where the visitors are less likely to go.

Still, the hookers are hoping to make a bundle. Two psychiatrists at Miami Beach convention last month delivered a paper based on interviews with 42 call girls across the country. The report concluded that national political conventions will be their major revenue sources.

HOWEVER, SUCH "action" won't directly help hte city's tax coffers. Any benefits the city would get would be in the "turnover" area, when the ladies of the night spend their money.

The Citizen's Committee has plans for colorful plantings along Fifth and Sixth Avenues — main arteries the delegates will be traveling — placing bunting on buildings and bathing a portion of the Empire State Building in red, white and blue lights. The Coca Cola Bottling Company is donating between 800 and 900 flags of the 56 delegations.

"Johnny Carson is one of our worst detractors with his jokes about New York muggings," says J. Andrew Hayes, vice president of the Citizen's Committee. "We hope to counter that by putting on a good show and laying on the hospitality."

Last month Democratic leaders from 41 of the state and territorial delegations were given a "walk-through" of arrangements made for them. They were met at the airports, as will all the delegations at convention time, taken to their respective hotels, introduced to the managers and given a tour of the city and convention site.

"IT'S GOING to be a good convention," South Carolina state chairman Don Fowler says. He says there should be no apprehension or fear over whether the decision to bring the convention here was wise.

Charles Manatt, California state chairman, says he is "very pleased with everything." His only regret was that the convention was going to be held here instead of Los Angeles, the runner-up city in the choice of sites.

Credit for nabbing the convention is generally given to New York State's Democratic chairman, Patrick Cunningham, with plenty of help from Mayor Abraham D. Beame and Gov. Hugh L. Carey, also Democrats. Ironically, Cunningham was indicted only six weeks before the convention for political wrongdoing and has temporarily suspended himself from the post.

Physical work on the convention site already is under way. The telephone company has been working since last November on installation of 6,000 telephones, 1,000 special service circuits such as teletypwriter, data and audio, 77 video lines, 250 additional public telephones — a total of 7,000 to 10,000 expected "customer service orders."

It's costing $7 million and New York Telephone doesn't anticipate a huge profit. It only "hopes to break even," a spokesman says.

Heralds plan full, local coverage

Tom Grieger

Steve Brown

Bob Finch

A reporter-photographer team from The Herald will attend the national conventions of both political parties to provide Northwest suburbanites with local coverage and color stories.

In addition: The Herald will use its wire service and syndicated feature specialists to bring its readers the full story of the conventions.

Reporting from both conventions will be Steve Brown, political writer. Accompanying him to New York City for the Democratic convention will be Tom Grieger, director of photography. Bob Finch, chief photographer of The Herald, will photograph the Republican National Convention at Kansas City, Mo.

GRIEGER IS A veteran of three national political conventions. A 1954 journalism graduate of Indiana University, Grieger joined The Herald staff in November 1963 as a photographer. He was named to head the photo department last August.

Finch has covered one previous national convention. He joined the staff as a photographer after receiving his degree in photojournalism from the University of Iowa in 1965. He has been chief photographer since 1971.

Brown joined The Herald staff as a reporter in 1971 following his graduation from Southern Illinois University and a stint in the military. He was named an assistant city editor in 1974, assignment editor in 1975 and was named to his present position last November.

Kansas City hoping to shed it's 'cow town' shadow

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Sharing the river bottoms west of Kansas City's skyscrapers are warehouses of mud-red brick and rusty corrugated sidings, noisy, rank-smelling stockyards and lonely boxcars the railroads seem to have forgotten.

Only one thing disturbs the uniform dreariness of the neighborhood — the $21 million Kemper Arena, site of the 1976 Republican National Convention.

Shaped like an Eastern hatbox, pristine in the unblemished white of its steel sides but wrapped around the top with an ungainly network of tubular girders, the arena is a monument to Kansas city's cow town past and — officials hope — its convention center future.

No building is more important to the Texas-style plans of city boosters.

If the Republicans come and go without any hitches, and the hordes of politicians, reporters and gawkers are favorably impressed, the city stands to reap a bonanza of publicity that money could never buy in conventions, industries and jobs.

KANSAS CITY knew there was money to be made and prestige to be won when it sent Ray Bennison, director of its convention and visitors bureau, to bid for the GOP convention.

The awesome economic impact of Bennison's successful mission is just beginning to sink in.

"The city will profit enormously in money from the convention," said Josephine Good, convention director on the Republican national staff in Washington. "There's bound to be a profit for practically anybody."

Some aspects of what she is talking about:

- The 20,000 delegates, news media representatives and guests at the Aug. 16-20 convention are expected to spend between $5 million and $8 million on food, drinks, hotels and entertainment.
- The GOP itself plans to spend $2 million, not only for operating expenses during convention week but the voluminous paperwork and physical preparations beforehand. The party's budget does not reflect the $500,000 the city is spending to prepare the convention site.
- Each of the three major television networks plans to send 500 to 600 persons to Kansas City and spend an estimated $1 million to $1.5 million on convention coverage, including weeks of advance preparations. Part of the networks' costs will be installation of a new, brighter lighting system in the arena to replace one that is barely a year old.
- Convention security is budgeted at $2.6 million. The biggest chunk will go for overtime pay for the police (more than $600 for each Kansas City officer), whose spending will further enrich the local economy.
- Convention publicity already has generated $50 million in new convention business for the next five years, Bennison said. That represents 200,000 delegates coming to Kansas City.

"It's going to put us on the map for national and international conventions," said Bennison, a glad-handing but serious man who never seems to stop moving.

His goal is to put Kansas City among the 10 leading U.S. convention cities by 1981 (it now ranks 17th) and the top five by 1986.

The GOP convention's long-term influence on Kansas City commerce is hard to guess, but officials are no less optimistic.

"What it boils down to is, if we come off good — which we will — it will be a positive factor in our future growth," said Bruce Hicks of the Chamber of Commerce of Greater Kansas City.

Bennison sayd the convention publicity alone is worth $10 million to the city. Someone joked that nothing short of hosting World War III could have brought Kansas City as much attention from the news media.

BUT THE PUBLICITY is a double-edged sword.

"If the conditions in Kansas City are good, it should help the city for future conventions unbelievably, but it can also hurt if it's not good," Miss Good said.

The city is busy solving a myriad of logistical problems before the first convention delegate arrives.

Restaurateurs will expand their hours and hire extra employes to handle the crowds. They speak enthusiastically of selling as many as 250,000 Kansas City strip steaks that week. At 20 strips to a steer, that would require a herd of 12,500 cattle, about as many as pass through the stockyards adjavent to the arena in an average week.

Stores in such elegant shopping areas as Crown Center and Country Club Plaza also will be open longer hours, with liberalized check-cashing policies to entice Republican souvenir buyers.

Liquor distributors are laying on extra drivers as required for emergency deliveries.

The telephone company is well under way with plans to install 10,000 extra telephones, thousands of private lines, teletypes, switchboards, and 44 video channels and 180 audio channels for broadcasters. It will all be enough to equip a town the size of Hannibal, Mo. (population 19,000), whose most famous native, Mark Twain, once said, "I do not know much about politics and am not sitting up nights to learn."

STILL, THE Republican staff says it is 4,700 short of the 16,000 hotel rooms required for the convention. Some large state delegations have been forced to take rooms in several hotels, which will make caucuses more dificult.

"Every hotel of any kind — good, bad or indifferent — will be used," Miss Good said.

Another question mark is how to transport everybody between hotels, and arena. No hotel is within walking distance of the arena, and transportation arrangements still are unsettled.

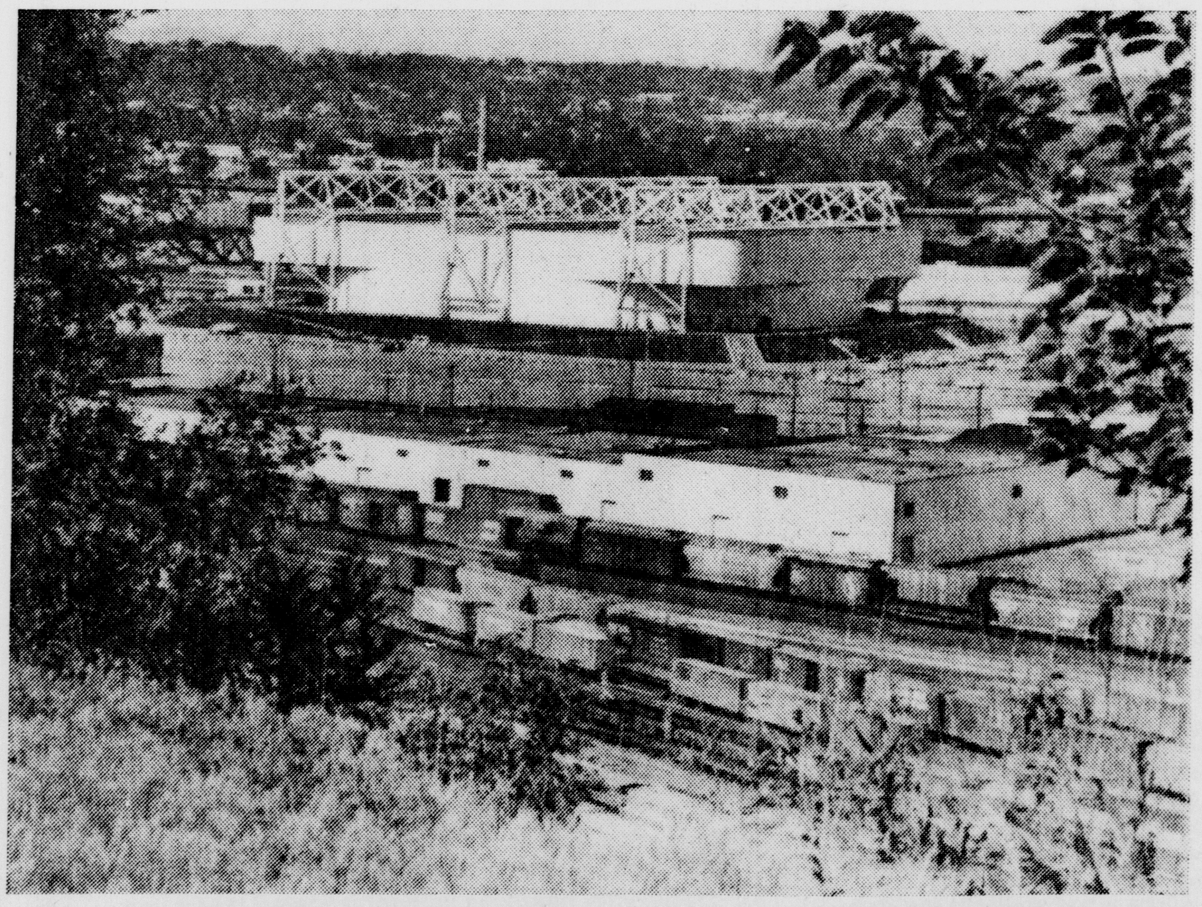

THE PREVAILING mood, though, optimism — a feeling that with typical Midwestern friendliness and a little luck, everything will run smoothly for what looks like a close, exciting convention battle between President Ford and Ronald Reagan.

The convention notwithstanding, Charles Jennings, president of the Kansas City Stock Yards Co., wants the city to promote itselr as the agribusiness capital of the world.

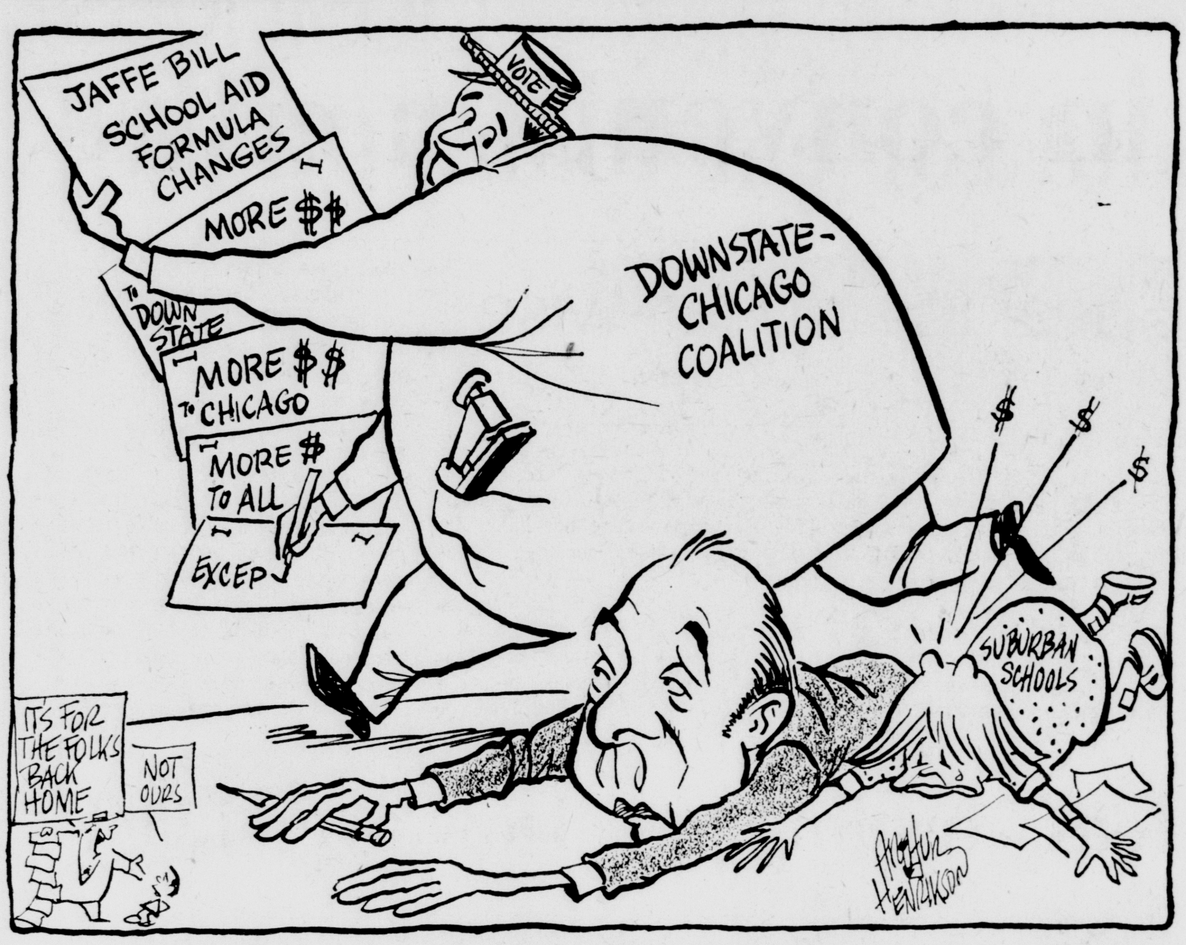

"We're always trying to shed our cow town image," he said. "There's some good about the cow town image. Let's be what we are."

Some other citizens are proud of the city's old image, and not altogother pleased at the prospect of booming growth.

"I think this will make Kansas City grow real fast and I don't like that," said Randy Kelly, manager of Kelly's Bar, one of the city's most popular. "Kansas City is a big cow town, but it is the greatest town in the world."

SHARING THE RIVER bottom west of Kansas City's skyscrapers are warehouses and lonely boxcars the railroads seem to have forgotten. Only one thing disturbs the uniform dreariness of the neighborhood — the $21 million Kemper Arena, site of the 1976 Republican National Convention.

'Outrageous' changes in school aid formula

The games being played by the Illinois General Assembly with the state school aid formula are an outrageous example of irresponsible lawmaking.

Last week, the Illinois House took a relatively simple bill proposed by State Rep. Aaron Jaffe, D-Skokie, which was designed to aid school districts with declining enrollments, and tacked on provisions making all sorts of other changes in the school aid formula.

The net result of the changes was that suburban school districts, which would have benefited the most from the original provisions of Jaffe's bill, ended up with a projected net loss in state aid amounting to nearly $3 million.

This week, the Illinois Senate latched onto the bill and has added still another amendment — allowing the Chicago Public Schools to repay the state aid they should lose (because they closed 16 days early) with imaginary money.

The Senate amendment allows the city schools to count the $20 million they must repay the state this year out of what they would have received if the state aid formula had been fully funded. Since the formula was not fully funded, the schools never received that $20 million anyway.

That amendment is patently outrageous, as is the whole idea of having the state forgive the Chicago schools for their early closing, a proposal made by the Chicago school board and teachers' union.

Not penalizing Chicago for the lost school days amounts to endorsing the Chicago board's irresponsibility in not making cuts earlier in the year, when it became clear the state aid formula was not going to be fully funded.

If suburban schools had acted as Chicago did, they would certainly be stewing in their own irresponsibility without legislative rescue missions.

As for the rest of the formula changes in the bill, including those which would benefit downstate unit school districts, some of them may be necessary to make the school aid formula more equitable.

It is unlikely, however, that the political wheeling and dealing that is going into the present bill, with the result that some school districts will gain at the expense of others, is the way to approach needed formula changes.

The Northwest suburbs' five senators, Sen. Bradley M. Glass, R-Northbrook; Sen. John A. Graham, R-Barrington; Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect; Sen. John Nimrod, R-Skokie; and Sen. Howard Mohr, R-Forest Park, should realize this and vote against the bill and use their influence to defeat it in the senate.

Northwest suburban schools, which have been hard pressed by inflation and have attempted to act responsibly by cutting budgets in the face of the cutback in school aid, do not deserve to be penalized because Chicago and downstate legislators have formed a coalition to try to get something for their respective areas.

Program worthwhile, interesting

People who are concerned about their fellow man are involved in a number of community service projects throughout the area.

A good example of this concern on a major scale is going on this week in Mount Prospect as Chicago Black Hawk hockey star Stan Mikita begins his third annual school for young people with hearing impairments.

Fifty nine young men are learning and playing hockey this week in an environment that will enhance their abilities on the ice.

Mikita and a large number of other people are giving their time and in some cases large amounts of money to provide this program. The clinic is a not-for-profit operation, and many participants are given scholarships to take part.

The clinic has reached one goal already this year; two young men will be getting professional tryouts this season.

The public has an opportunity Saturday to take part in this program.

The Chicago Black Hawks and other professional hockey players will compete against the older participants in the clinic at 10 a.m. at the Randhurst Twin Ice Arena. Purchasing a ticket to this game will offer an opportunity to see some good ice hockey and allow this program to help more young people in the future.

PHILADELPHIA, June 18 — Congress published a resolution aimed at protecting suspected Tories from mob action. It said any actions against such persons should be undertaken only upon order of a responsible authority. The delegates also decided to place seven provincial battalions under continental command because of the British threat to South Carolina.

League: not enough time for a forum

We were very happy to read your June 11 editorial regarding the suggested forum for the upcoming interim mayoral election by the Des Plaines City Council on June 21. We, too, regard this election as important; however, we feel that it would be impossible to get out enough advance publicity for a successful "Meet the Candidates" night before June 21 as you suggeted in your editorial.

It has been our experience in the past that candidates nights are poorly attended. Many candidates who have participated express reluctance to accept invitations because of this problem. We would appreciate ideas and comments anyone has about forums such as "Meet the Candidates" nights. Do you consider them necessary in learning about the candidates and their views? Would you attend? Is printed information just as acceptable? Please address your views to the League of Women Voters of Des Plaines, P. O. Box 1576, Des Plaines, Ill. 60018. Please reply before the end of August.

With this being an election year, we are planning to have the "Voter's Guide" available to the citizens at a nominal cost. This is a non-partisan newspaper which contains the biographies and positions on issues of the candidates as well as registration and voting procedures.

WE WISH TO reemphasize that at this time it is the aldermen who will cast the ballots in this interim mayoral election, and all we citizens can do is to indicate to our alderman our preference. Next spring, however, the citizens will be able to cast ballots directly for the mayor.

We urge The Herald to continue the fine coverage of important local elections and other issues in the paper which keep the citizens informed. We hope that your paper will print background information about the three candidates running for acting Mayor of Des Plaines and we urge the citizens to read and consider the information and to contact their aldermen and express their preference.

Seitz supported by Ald. Kraves

As alderman of the 6th ward in the City of Des Plaines, I feel the people in my ward should know for whom I am casting my vote for interim mayor. My vote will be cast for Jack Seitz.

Jack Seitz brings something to the city that the two other announced candidates do not. Jack brings a total commitment to the city, and that committment is to be a full-time mayor. The taxpayers of this city deserve nothing less. We have a $15 million budget, 400 employes, 60,000 people to be concerned about, vandalism, flooding, traffic problems, etc., and we need a full-time mayor and a person with administrative experience to handle this job. Jack is intelligent and capable, cautious but not pessimistic and with his expertise in business, is the man who should be the interim full-time mayor.

Our form of government should not be changed by the whims of the aldermen. Our local government belongs to the people. If our local government is to be changed, it must be changed by the people and not by the politicians. Referendums are still valid. That is where the true will of the people is voiced. The people previously voted for a full-time mayor for the City of Des Plaines.

Jack Seitz will serve as a full time mayor and I will cast my vote for Jack Seitz.

Some at graduation were inconsiderate

I sincerely hope that all of the rude, uncooperative people who were present at Carl Sandburg School graduation Thursday evening, June 10, are pleased with themselves.

Not only did they succeed in putting a damper on the whole ceremony, they took seats away from the graduates themselves, making it necessary for the young people to stand in the hall and miss seeing their classmates receive their diplomas.

I hope it was worth spoiling graduation for a number of very nice kids.

Hey, Elk Grove, we're here!

As a resident of Elk Grove Village's Winston Groves subdivision, I just want to say — HEY, WE'RE OVER HERE!! for the benefit of the Elk Grove Park District and the village board.

As a taxpaying member of this community, I was enraged to look at the list of summer activities offered by the Elk Grove Park District for the children, only to discover that I would have to drive my children if they wished to particpate because the park district did not include one activity at Adlai Stevenson School, down the block.

I was appalled at the Elk Grove Park District's maintenance of Rachel Carson Park on the day Stevenson School had its field activities there in ankle high sticker weeds and lunch among the broken glass. It was impossible to walk across the park, let alone have the kids sit down between events!

"BABY" SWINGS cannot be added to the play equipment, due to lack of funds, yet the park district took over the task of moving and restoring a delapidated old house no one else wanted for a future museum. It would be interesting to know what that project will cost. And in the meantime, our children have no place to play. We're still watching the land by Stevenson School, which is also supposed to be part of the park district someday. . .maybe after the house is done.

The village board, on the other hand, refused to understand that we in this area are having water problems. As of today, we are not allowed to sprinkle, but I do not believe this will eliminate the problem since there isn't enough water to use the toilet, there certainly isn't enough to water anything outside. Is this our Bicentennial contribution, to live as the pioneers and carry water buckets? We have dirty clothes, dirty dishes, dirty kids, dead lawns, and are praying for rain; but it would help if the wells were back in operation and the new one working. There was not enough water last summer, and with more new residents in the new section, isn't it logical that we are going to have a bigger problem with two or three wells down?

It is time the village recognizes that this area will be growing for some time to come and start planning ahead to eliminate these unnecessary problems. It is the responsibility of the village to insure the health and safety of its residents and provide the children with recreational facilities now when they are needed, not when they are too old to enjoy them. Is it always necessary to ban together and fight? Isn't it time the village looks our way?

Salary committee chair: board has shown 'disdain'

Since the party of "open government" took office in Wheeling, the wage and salary committee has been continuously subjected to closed doors, ears and minds. How can we, as employes, have respect for the village board and their positions when they don't have enough respect for us to meet face to face or even give us explanation for decisions made behind closed doors?

The board's contradictions are apparent. The village board has rejected binding arbitration because it says only they can make the final decision regarding expenditure of village funds. Yet, when the wage and salary committee points out that this is the exact reason why we want to deal with the board directly, we are ignored. The village board states to the media that the employes cut off negotiations. It is ironic that this public statement was made shortly after the committee sent a letter directly to the board requesting a meeting — and never received the courtesy of a response. The board has also publicly stated that unionization is not needed because the employes have the wage and salary committee to represent them. This is ludicrous, as the board then turned around and refused to discuss representation, wages and/or fringe beneits. To add more insult to injury, the board then had the audacity to say they would continue to have their representatives meet with us, as long as it was not to discuss these pressing issues. The employes are curious as to what else there is to discuss!

AT THE FIRST session this year between the wage and salary committee and the management negotiating team, management was asked why numerous positions within the village had been eliminated from representation by the wage and salary committee. The response was that these positions were management. When it was pointed out that a village ordinance specifically stated that these positions were not management, the committee was told, "We'll change the ordinance." This arrogant, to hell with the employes attitude, has prevailed. When the board said they would assign a token trustee to sit in on a meeting, the meeting was delayed until a convenient time for the trustee could be established, even though this was not convenient for the 14 members of the wage and salary committee. Statements have been made to the press by members of the board which have been one-sided, exaggerated or false, conceivably because the board has not been enlightened about the employes' side of the issues. They cannot be enlightened unless they are willing to listen.

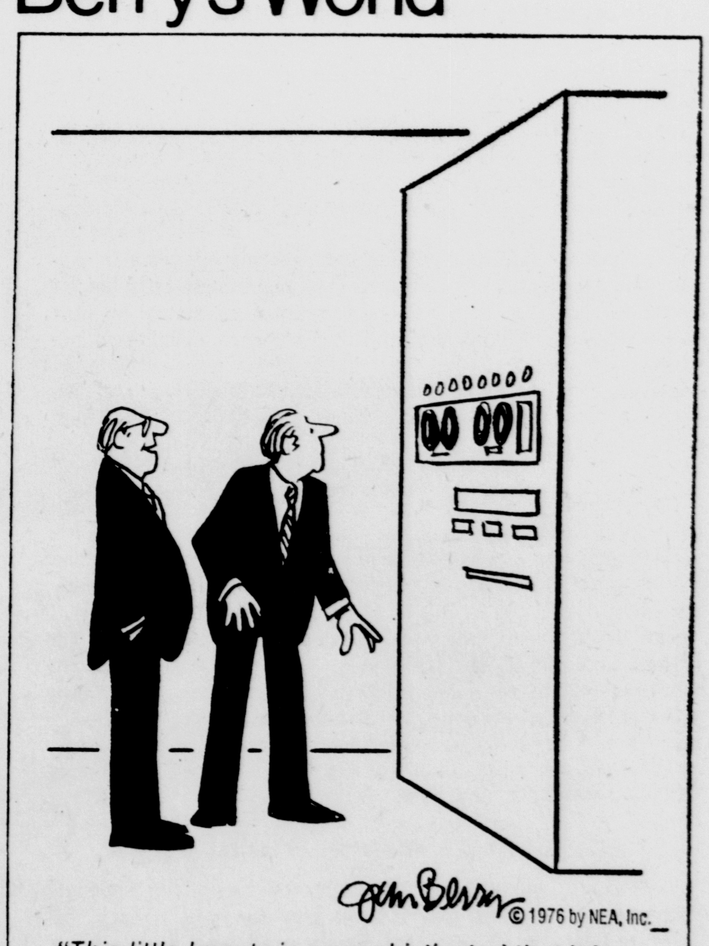

In prior years members of the committee met face-to-face with the village board to discuss issues which cannot be intelligently dealt with through memos or a token board representative. These sessions were occasionally heated, as seems natural when you were involved with issues that affect a man's livelihood and career. But with a minimum of delay, these meetings produced results.

More important, a mutual respect was gained for the positions taken by both sides and issues, not personalities were the focal point of discussions.

Negotiations never took place this year, because the board didn't allow them to start. For the board to have honest disagreement on issues with the employes is understandable. For the board not to live up to its responsibilities as elected officials is unforgivable. The wage and salary committee wishes the village board and the public to know that the board's inept attempt at dealing with employes has created an atmosphere of distrust and of disdain which can only be rectified by officials who are willing to live up to campaign promises of "open government."

Shop around for car loan, it'll pay

Speaking dollar-wise

by Robert S. Rosefsky

You're financing a new car on a three-year loan plan. You'll be borrowing $3,000. One lender offers you a deal that will oblige you to pay $630 in interest over the three years. Another offers a deal that will involve only $450 in interest. A difference of $180.

Farfetched? Not really. The ever-pulsating competition among lenders can result in substantial savings to borrowers who do a bit of shopping around before they sign any papers. The above example was taken from a survey of 10 major cities, conducted by the U. S. House Subcommittee on Domestic Monetary Policy. In all cities surveyed, there was a considerable difference between the high and low loan costs, with Detroit and Miami having the biggest spread for car loans. Cleveland had the biggest spread for 24-month household appliance loans and Chicago had the biggest spread for 12-month unsecured personal loans.

Loan rates will vary from time to time, from larea to area and form lender to lender. The point is that it does pay to shop.

NOTE THESE GUIDELINES in your quest for the best deal:

• The Truth in Lending Law requires that all finance costs be expressed as the annual percentage rate (APR). This equalizes all quotes for loans of the same duration. When you're given the quote, be sure that you understand how long the loan is to run. For example: one lender may quote you 11.96 APR for a three-year car loan. Another may quote you 10.85 APR, without stating that that's for a four-year loan. The rate is lower, sure, but you'll be paying for one year longer, thus a lot more total interest expense. Watch out for the lure.

• Life and disability insurance can add appreciably to your over-all cost. These are forms of insurance sold by the lender to protect both the borrower and the lender, with the borrower paying for it. If the borrower dies, any remaining balance on the loan is paid off by the life insurance. If the borrower is disabled, his loan payments are made for him by the disability insurance. Generally, the amount of the premium for these insurances is added to the amount you borrow, so that you end up paying interest on the premium as well as on the loan.

THESE FORMS OF insurance can vary widely, as can their costs. If you do want to have this coverage, be sure that you understand what you're getting for your money. And in comparing over-all quotes from lenders, you should determine how much insurance, if any, if included in the quote.

• Often, the terms of the loan can affect the rate. Thus you might get a more favorable loan rate by making a larger down payment, by taking a shorter loan or by including more collateral along with your signature. Ask about these factors when you shop.

• What about dealer financing? It can be convenient and also more costly. I personally favor dealing directly with your local banker, not just for price but also because the personal relationship can be valuable in other ways.

• In shopping for auto financing, don't overlook your auto insurance company. They may offer competitive rates. But rates between the insurance company and the bank being equal, I'd still give the nod to the local bank because of the continuing personal relationship regarding your other financial needs.

Heavy trading puts Dow over 1,000

NEW YORK (UPI — The Dow Jones industrial average smashed through the 1,000 level Thursday for the seventh time this year in the heaviest trading in three months on the New York Stock Exchange.

In a rally sparked by strong economic reports, the closely-watched Dow average, a 2.70-point winner Wednesday, soared 14.57 points to 1,003.19, the best level since it closed at 1,005.67 May 12. It was the biggest gain in the Dow since it climbed 15.35 points April 20. In the six previous moves through the 1,000 level this year,the Dow ran into profit-taking pressures that drove it back.

The average reached a 1976 high of 1,011.02 April 22. Its all-time high of 1,051.70 was reached Jan. 11, 1973. A number of analysts have predicted it would top that mark this year and reach upwards of $1,100 or 1,200.

THE VOLUME of 27,810,000 shares, up from the 21,620,000 traded Wednesday, was the heaviest turnover since 32,605,470 shares changed hands March 24 and brought joy to Wall Street brokerages, which have suffered through three months of stagnant trading.

Other averages showed the breadth of the rally. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 1.60 to 103.61, a new 1976 high; the NYSE common stock index 0.81 to 55.17 and the average price of an NYSE common share increased by 50 cents.

Advances routed declines, 1,133 to 364, among the 1,846 issues crossing the tape.

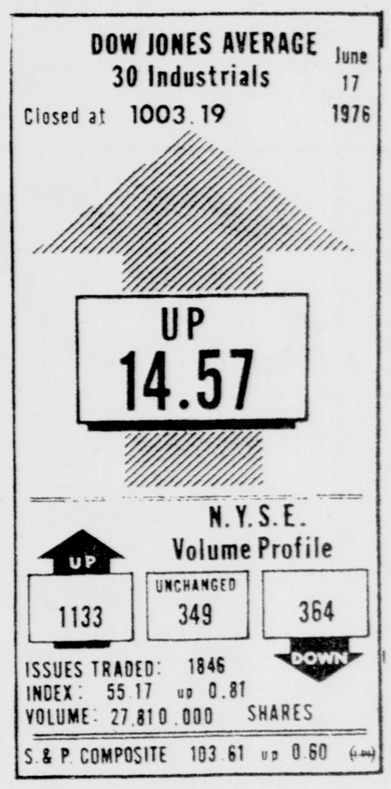

Sparking the surge were government reports showing production climbed 0.7 per cent in May,the 14th consecutive monthly gain; housing starts rose 0.2 per cent, and personal income jumped 0.8 per cent. Also, retail sales rose 2 per cent last week.

AN AFTERNOON burst was sparked by the Federal Reserve Board, which took steps to drive down federal fund rates banks charge one another for overnight loans. The step again indicated the Fed is not tightening credit as it did in the past three months.

American Telephone & Telegraph topped the Big Board actives, climbing 1-1/8 to 56 on 758,700 shares, including a block of 172,200 shares at 56¼. A 12-million-share offering of AT&T stock was oversubscribed, showing a strong institutional interest in the most widely-held blue-chip stock in the nation.

TWA was the second most active issue, up ¼ to 13 on 361,000 shares, including a block of 178,600 shares at 12-7/8. The stock lost most of an earlier gain. The firm reported a $12.2 million profit in May, compared with a $700,000 loss a year ago. Also, the airline announced plans to sell 2 million new shares.

Transamerica was the third most active issue, up 3/8 to 11-¼ on 297,700 shares, including a block of 218,800 shares at 11. Many big blocks were traded, indicating institutional activity.

Business briefs

House passes loan, minimum wage bills

The Illinois House passed bills to bring the hourly minimum wage to $2.30 and to tie home loan interest rate ceilings to the yield on long-term U.S. Government bonds.

The minimum wage bill (H3318), by Rep. Thomas Hanahan, D-McHenry, also boosts the wage for teen-agers from $1.55 per hour to $1.95. The vote was 106-50. The bill, effective July 1, would affect about 200,000 workers not covered by federal law.

The mortgage bill (H2115), sponsored by Rep. Doug Kane, D-Springfield, passed 99-41 despite complaints mortgage loan interest rates would soar and drive poor and young buyers out of the housing market. The bill sets home loan interest ceilings at 2.5 per cent over interest paid on long-term bonds.

Trade exposition July 1-18

Exhibits, entertainment and special attractions from around the world will be included in the Bicentennial Chicago International Trade Exposition July 1-18 at Navy Pier, Chicago.

Thomas H. Coulter, chief executive officer of the Chicago Assn. of Commerce and Industry which sponsors the exposition, said more than 20 countries will participate in the show. U .S. companies also plan exhibits.

Job outlook better: panel

A spring surge in private employment has improved job opportunities for recent college graduates, said the College Placement Council Tuesday. The Bethlehem, Pa., firm said private employers report a 10 per cent hike in hiring levels, compared to a 24 per cent government cutback. Over-all, hiring is down 2 per cent from 1975 levels.

Times changing news format

The New York Times will have a new look Sept. 7 that is supposed to make it easier to read and cheaper to print. Publisher Arthur Ochs Sulzberger announced Monday the Times will switch from its eight-column to a six-column news format, the first basic change in the news column format since 1913.

30-cent coal tax OKd

The Senate Wednesday passed a bill which would put a 30-cent tax on every ton of coal mined in Illinois, with the money going to coal-producing counties, mine reclamation and administration. The measure passed by a 30 to 18 vote with three senators voting present. It now goes to the House.

Working woman job bias cited

Two consumer health groups charged Thursday that rather than make jobs safer, some employers discriminate against working women of child-bearing age.

The charge was made in a report issued at the opening of a three-day Conference on Women and the Workplace in Washington, D.C. It was published jointly by the Ralph Nader-affiliated Health Research Group and the University of California's Labor Occupational Health Program.

More than one million women of child-bearing age work in jobs that could expose them to chemicals that might cause birth defects and miscarriages, according to the government's National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health. "As evidence mounts that substances used on the job can cause birth defects and miscarriages, employers have begun to discriminate against fertile and pregnant women workers instad of making the workplaces safer," the report said.

Social security change sought

President Ford asked Congress Thursday to fix "a serious flaw" in the Social Security system that makes it possible some future retirees could draw more in benefits than they earned while working.

Ford would allow yearly cost-of-living increases for those who already have retired. But his plan would freeze at 1978 levels the percentage of pre-tretirement income a retired person could draw in Social Security payments. The President also asked Congress to approve a three-tenths of 1 per cent increase in Social Security contributions by employers and workers to cut in half the existing deficit in funding for the system.

Congress resumes works fight

In February Congress fought a major veto battle with President Ford over public works jobs and lost. Now the issue is back, and Congress thinks it can win. The Senate approved a $4 billion bill sponsors claim would create up to 300,000 jobs. The 69-25 vote was six more than the two-thirds needed to override a possible veto.

to create a pavilion in a park."

It is the first and only gas station he has designed. "I saw it as an unusual opportunity, but also a chance to hit at the blighting influences," Booth said.

Kornacker said some motorists may have had trouble identifying the structure as a gas station in the past.

"IT HAS BEEN neglected in the past few yeas. People were not really aware of its beauty," he said.

While its unusual design has provoked some comments, the pumps are the items that attract the attention, he said.

"They notice the pumps — they don't know which side they are supposed to pull up on," he said.

Kornacker said the station's 10 pumps are the only such pumps in operation.

"THEY MADE 15 of them, think. We have 10 of them here and the rest are in storage as replacements," he said.

While architect Booth may have been trying to make clean sweeping statements with the building, to Kornacker it says "safety."

"It's ideal to work in," he said. "Because it's glass all the way around, police can drive by and look in. You don't have to worry about somebody taking you in the back room and blowing your head off."

Another factor of the design, although not as critical, is that all the pumps are protected from the elements by the sweeping steel decks, he said.

THE ARCHITECTS' intramural battle has resulted in pictures of the station being featured in Chicago and Newsweek magazines recently.

Debbie Lange said this publicity has brought photographers running around the station, "framing" the place with their hands and seeking the right angle to capture its clean lines on film.

"It's really a gas," was Ms. Lange's statement on the subject.

City, suburb cooperation emphasized

NIPC upholds 'finger' commuter plan

by WANDALYN RICE

A 1968 plan calling for suburban development along the area's commuter rail lines is still the best plan for the Chicago metropolitan area despite increasing suburban independence from the city, officials of the Northeastern Illinois Plan Commission said Thursday.

The 1968 plan, called the "finger plan," said suburban development should be concentrated within a 10-minute drive of commuter train stations with open space being left between the "fingers," NIPC's Matthew Rockwell said.

Commission Pres. James McClure said the finger plan remains a good one because "rail transportation is the best way for moving people."

He said the plan recognizes that there must be transportation between suburbs as well as between the suburbs and Chicago but "the region is interedependent. The suburbs need Chicago and Chicago needs the suburbs."

ROCKWELL SAID, "The old finger plan seems to be working well except in one area, the development of regional shopping centers. We have found there is still a tendency to build (shopping centers) in cornfields where the land is cheap."

Rockwell said the finger plan is being retained in a newly updated version of the NIPC plan approved Thursday by the 25 member commission, but that the reference to 10-minute driving time has been dropped.

The plan update, he said, also emphasizes that local communities should consider the costs of providing roads and other services to regional shopping centers before allowing them to be built far from existing services.

Rockwell, McClure and Constance Zimmerman, chairman of the commission's planning committee, said Thursday the updated plan will be used when the commission reviews proposals for use of federal funds in the six-county metropolitan area.

NIPC makes recommendations to the federal government on various grant programs using its planning studies for the region.

OTHER CHANGES in the plan include an increased emphasis on the need for equal opportunity in housing, Rockwell said.

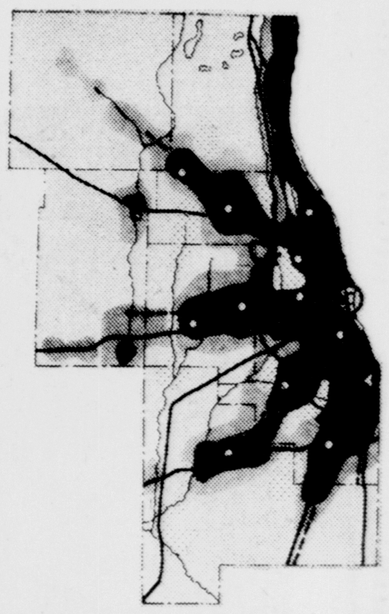

In addition, the new plan categorizes a number of suburbs, such as Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village and Schaumburg, as "newly urbanized areas" rather than as "development areas."

McClure said the newly urbanized areas will have to concentrate on problems of housing for workers and water and sewer problems of densely populated areas in the future, rather than on the problems of controlling growth.

In addition, the plan will encourage future development adjacent to presently developed areas "to avoid the hopscotch method," Mrs. Zimmerman said.

McClure said the updated plan also has been changed to reflect NIPC's realization since 1968 that local governments and not the commission will make final planning decisions. He said, "We all recognize that we are advisory only, but what has come out of this is the awareness of public officials that planning involves regional and not just local concern."

Rockwell said the original 1968 plan cost $140,000 to develop and the update cost NIPC about $35,000 in staff time over a three-year period.

THIS MAP shows the development patterns recommended for the Chicago suburbs by the Northeastern Illinois Plan Commission. The "finger plan" endorsed in a revised plan adopted by NIPC Thursday, calls for development along the area's commuter railroads, including the Chicago and North Western Ry.

Community band in Palatine

Going strong 100 years later

by BONITA BRODT

One hundred years ago members of the first Palatine band wore dark, navy blue military uniforms with matching caps. The band was small in those days, only about 15 regulars. Yet, those few men ignited an enthusiasm for community music in Palatine that continues today.

Now called the Palatine Concert Band, the group includes 40-60 year-round musicians. Members practice once a week at Palatine High School for three winter concerts and a summer series of free, Friday night performances which begin tonight, 8 o'clock, in Palatine Community Park.

In the century since the Palatine band originated, several changes have taken place. Women were allowed to join for the first time in 1958, when the group was revived after disbanding during the Depression. The name has changed several times. Originally called the Palatine Military Band, it was renamed Palatine Northwest Community Band in 1958, and then in the '60s it was again changed to Palatine Village Band.

RALPH SCHROEDER (above) has played with the Palatine Concert Band for 19 years. His father, Henry Schroeder, was also a member. He appears (third from right, last row) in the picture of the band taken in 1912 when it was called the Palatine Military Band. Other former members include Ben Blume (first from right, last row), Dan Bergman and Adolph Kuntze (third and second from right, center row).

TODAY'S CONCERT BAND is composed of volunteer adult musicians — and occasionally a youngster or two — who simply enjoy playing an instrument. You don't have to be a superb musician to join — some members have even learned to play an instrument while practicing with the band.

At present, members represent 16 suburban communities. Some have made music their profession and appreciate the extra practice time the band offers; others consider the Tuesday evening practice session a good opportunity to brush up on a retired high school music career and socialize.

In the summer, the Palatine Concert Band no longer marches in parades. Instead, members comfortably ride in an old, converted school bus as they play their music. That's progress.

There are a few men around, however, who remember Palatine's marching band days.

Ninety-four-year-old Dan Bergman, who still farms with his son in Palatine, is the oldest veteran of the Palatine Military Band. He was a member for about 10 years and played a cornet, he said.

"SOMETIMES WE WOULD go to Crystal Lake and even to Glencoe to march in the parades. We were pretty good, too. I remember one time, we didn't really have enough people to march in a parade but, somehow, we gathered up enough members and won the $100 first prize," he said. "Then after that parade, we gave $50 to the high school band and used the other half to take ourselves out to dinner that night," he recalled laughingly.

In the winter months, Bergman said, the military band was not as active. "We would always enjoy going to town on Tuesday evenings. We would go to practice, but we always ended up at Schoppe's store to sit around the stove and talk," he said.

THE YOUNGEST MEMBER of the military band, Adolph Kuntze, was a cornet player still wearing knickers. Today, at age 76, he has long grown out of his knee pants. He currently resides in Amarillo, Tex., though he remembers well his days with the band.

"Whenever the stores were open at night, we would play on a bandstand on the corner of Brockway and Slade Streets in the village. On New Year's Eve, we would always play at a dance — and made enough money to pay our director," he said in a phone interview.

Another old-timer, Ben Blume, is now 80 and lives in Harrison, Ark. His best recollections of military band days were the hot, summer afternoons when bandsmen would wear their hot, military uniforms and march through village streets.

Ralph Schroeder, a trombone player with today's band, has been an active member for 19 years, which is longer than any other member. His father, Henry, was also a trombone player in the band and Ralph's son played before he moved from the area.

TO ADD A sentimental flavor to performances, Palatine band directors often sift through the brittle and yellowed band music played by their predecessors. And for Ralph Schroeder, it once brought a special memory.

"One day, they were passing out some of the older songs. I looked down at the music on my stand and there was my father's name written on the top of the sheet in his own handwriting. It was just like I was sitting there, playing along with him," he said.

Schroeder was one of the men who helped the band along as it was reactivated in the '50s. "Adolph Kuntze called me one day and said they were trying to get enough members together so we could march in the Centennial parade. He wanted me to take my father's place. I couldn't play my trombone too well — hadn't practiced much since high school — but I joined," he said.

"IN THOSE DAYS, just after the band was started up again, we used to have to run around like crazy men, performing at every place we could to get enough money to pay our director," Schroeder said.

The band at that time was unable to afford uniforms until about $200 was donated to it Schroeder said. Then they purchased uniforms: band trousers, white shirts, red suspenders, black string neckties and caps copied after the earlier military uniforms. Schroeder keeps his outfit intact hanging in his closet.

During the winter season, the concert band members wear black and white clothes of their own choice. In the summer, they simply wear street clothes. The band is funded by both the Village of Palatine and the Palatine Park District. That money helps pay directors. Arthur Katterjohn directs during the winter season and spends the summers teaching music. Stan Louiseau, the summer director, is a regular band member during the winter.

MEMBERS IN TODAY'S Palatine Concert Band are music enthusiasts, to say the least. At Tuesday night rehearsals, the mixture of young and old musicians tap their toes madly to the sometimes very difficult selections. Louiseau will stop rehearsal several times as he and the members strive for their own kind of musical perfection.

"This band is composed of players of several different strengths," said Louiseau. "We play some really difficult music, and sometimes I'm surprised at just how good it sounds. I guess there is that temptation to hand out easier music in the summer when we have to rely on sight reading, but that's not the right thing for this band. These are ambitious people who are ready to tackle most any piece of music, no matter how difficult."

The public is invited to attend rehearsals every Tuesday, 8-10 p.m., at Palatine High School, 150 Wood St. Persons having participated at three rehearsals are then eligible to join the Palatine Concert Band.

Ravina fever hits music fans every summer

by LOIS HENDERLONG

The Ravinia bug — it's kind of like spring fever. Once you've got it, you don't want to get rid of it.

In fact, for many the contagion gets stronger each year — because no matter what your craving, be it Bach, ballet or Benny Goodman, the Ravinia Festival in Highland Park dishes it out with style.

And if your penchant happens to be for something a little more off the beaten track — some Poulenc songs, maybe, or an offbeat contemporary drama — that can be found, too, in the woodsy Midsummer Night's Dream-like setting of the 36-acre park. The question isn't "What's Ravinia got?"; it's "What hasn't it got?"

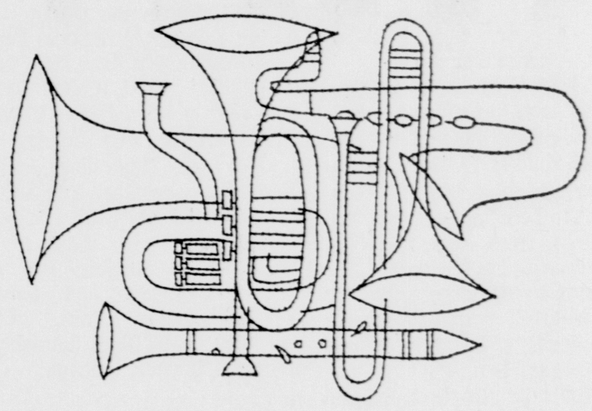

Rock and hard jazz fans might argue that there's precious little for them, and there's some truth in what they say. Those who seek vintage Miles Davis or a wild night with Alice Cooper had best be off in search of other haunts; security problems have led the Ravinia administration to steer clear of entertainment that might attract a rowdy audience. But there's good folk music to be had, some soft pop and the best of the classic jazz performers, in addition to chamber and full orchestra concerts, plays and dance.

There was a time when Ravinia fever meant Opera, definitely with a capital O. Those who remember that time, the era of the Roaring '20s and of great voices like Chaliapin, get nostalgic at the recollection of years when a 35-opera season seemed the most natural of things. There was Verdi and Puccini galore, plus Wagner, Massenet and enough unusual bonbons to give the season more variety than you'll be able to find in any company's schedule nowadays.

TIMES, AND perhaps tastes, have changed since then, but opera is not yet extinct at Ravinia. Gone are the trappings. What was in the pre-Depression era a lavish spectacle is now a slimmed down version given by the in-residence Chicago Symphony. Concert operas are easier to put on; no staging, no costumes, no sets to worry about, only voices to contend with. Of course, there's nothing to camouflage those voices, either, so what a voice it takes to stand up to that test!

Who better for the challenge than today's best-known soprano, Beverly Sills? In the past few years she's been paired with Ravinia Musical Director James Levine for concert versions of Bellini's "Norma" and some youthful Mozart operas. Instead, this time around she's doing operatic selections with Sarah Caldwell, Boston opera's shining light, in the conductor's spot.

Most often, though, the podium belongs to 33-year-old James Levine, entering his fourth season as musical director as the Festival enters its 41st year. If critics were skeptical when he was ushered in at the tender age of 29 — virtuoso babes-in-arms all too often are still having growing pains — they've since reneged. Meanwhile, apparently oblivious to anyone's doubts, Levine has continued confidently ahead, sure of his judgment and willing to try out new things.

SINCE HIS arrival the Festival has innovated one-composer programs, from audience-pleasers like Schubert and Tchaikovsky to real audience challenges like Schoenberg. Berg, Schuller, Cage and other contemporary free spirits also appear on the roster occasionally. And, at least so far, Levine's inclinations have seldom turned out to be miscalculations.

This year the one-composer events offer those comfortable standbys, Bach, Beethoven and Mozart, as well as an evening of Prokofieff.

Levine will open the season Thursday with a resounding roar, conducting the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and the Chicago Symphony Chorus, as well as vocal soloists Carol Neblett, Beverly Wolff, Nico Castel, Robert Nagy Ragnar Ulfung and Arnold Voketaitis, in the first area performance of Schoenberg's massive "Gurre-Lieder."

Like every other arts organization, business firm, race track, gas station and hotdog haven, Ravinia is celebrating the Bicentennial. The music Levine has chosen for his All-American program is straight-forward, fresh and invigorating — more than can be said about many of the celebration offerings. Charles Ives' metaphysical muse, "The Unanswered Question," Leonard Bernsteins' "Overture to Candide," Aaron Copland's "Appalachian Spring" and the Piano Concerto by Samuel Barber make up the concert. There will also be an all-Gershwin night and a program devoted to Scott Joplin rags.

ON THE POP-JAZZ side, the lineup could well be called All-American, quality-wise. Returning to Ravinia, where he plays nearly annually, is Benny Goodman with his sextet. The rest of the season will include Ella Fitzgerald, the Preservation Hall Jazz Band, Pete Seeger and Arlo Guthrie, Harry Chapin, Ferrante and Teicher, Judy Collins, The Lettermen, Barry Manilow, Linda Ronstadt, Kris Kristofferson with Rita Collidge, and Neil Sedaka.

Ticket orders flooded in for Barry Manilow, so in addition to his originally scheduled Aug. 6 performance, he will give a concert Aug. 9, with tickets on sale starting at 10 a.m. Sunday at Ravinia's Highland Park office.

The City Center's Joffrey Ballet will take up residence at the park Aug. 17-22, bringing back such past season favorites as Gerald Arpino's "Confetti," Twyla Tharp's "Deuce Coupe II" and Anthony Tudor's "Offenbach in the Underworld," as well as new pieces choreographed by Arpino, Alvin Ailey, Jerome Robbins, John Cranko and Kurt Joos. Also scheduled is the Bella Lewitzky Dance Company Aug. 1 and 2.

FOR THREE WEEKS the youthful but well-disciplined Acting Company, under direction of John Houseman, will be offering what promises to be true ensemble acting in William Congreve's Resto-

TV's 'Kotter' theme song makes hit on new album

Playback

by Tom Von Malder

The television theme song has been the surprise source of several hits so far this year and John Sebastian's theme for "Welcome Back, Kotter" is the best of the lot.

Although it took awhile, that theme is now available in an album, "Welcome Back" (Reprise records), that is Sebastian's best since 1969's "John B. Sebastian."

There is an inviting warmth throughout the album and, of course, the barely restrained joy of the title song. Sebastian's mirth also surfaces on "One Step Forward, Two Steps Back," a funky, shuffling dance takeoff.

OTHER GOOD songs are the soft ballad "She's Funny," the bluesy "Warm Baby" and the not-quite-as-bluesy "I Needed Her Most When I Told Her To Go." Sebastian has several good harp solos, including one on the instrumental "Let This Be Our Time To Get Along." "You Go Your Way and I'll Go Mine" is an easygoing rocker about breaking up.

The former Lovin' Spoonful member also does one country song, "A Song a Day in Nashville."

Two factors contribute greatly to the album's success. They are Steve Barri's co-production and Sebastian's improved songwriting. Welcome back, indeed.

Ian Anderson, creative genius behind Jethro Tull, likes concept albums. The group's act is built around them. So it is no surprise, with a tour expected soon, that the new album, "Too Old To Rock 'N' Roll: Too Young To Die" (Chrysalis), is a concept album.

It appears a more mature work than some of the earlier concepts, with more emphasis on a soft, acoustic sound. It tells the story of Ray Lomas, an old rocker who refuses to change with the times. He becomes a quiz show contestant, meets a woman and gets stood up, has a motorcycle accident and when he recovers finds out he is suddenly back in style.

THE UPTEMPO, harmonica-drive "Taxi Grab" and the title song are the two standouts, but also good are "Quizz Kid," "The Chequered Flag" and the slow, bluesy and melancholy "From a Dead Beat To an Old Greaser."

Special bonuses are printed lyrics and a comic strip version of the story, which should be R-rated. Jethro Tull will appear at the Chicago Stadium Aug. 5.

Other new releases include:

• "Cry Tough" by Nils Lofgren (A&M). There's no question that Lofgren is one of rock's better guitarists, with a superb fluid style. Unfortunately, too often on this record the technique seems to be of no purpose. The album suffers from weak writing, with the title song the exception. For a rock album by someone noted for his "street image," there's not enough grit. The blurring of Lofgren's vocals becomes annoying, too.

• "Faithful" by Todd Rundgren (Bearsville). Side one is Todd and three-fifths of Utopia having a ball trying to be the Yardbirds, Beach Boys, Beatles, Bob Dylan and Jimi Hendrix. They are best as the Beatles. As to whether we need it, that depends on your mood. It can be taken as a lot of fun.

Side two features Rundgren originals but, except for "The Verb 'To Love'," which itself is too long, the songs are forgettable. "When I Pray" takes its inspiration from the familiar child's prayer and "Boogies (Hamburger Hell)" contains the recipe for a Big Mac.

• "Close Enough For Rock 'N' Roll" by Nazareth (A&M). The Scottish quartet's seventh album (if I haven't lost count) is disappointing, especially since the group is just starting to become a superstar. Much of the album is written around life on the road, a common theme for the band. The four-part "Telegram" picks up only at the end with the far too brief "Here We Are Again."

The album's best effort is "Carry Out Feeling" with its good lyric irony and very melodic vocals. It is the screechers that disappoint this time out.

Soundings:

LINDA RONSTADT, EMMYLOU HARRIS and DOLLY PARTON, three of country's best singers, have taped a performance for Parton's new "Dolly" show which premieres in September.

PETER FONDA sings and acts in the film "Outlaw Blues." There will be a soundtrack album . . . PAUL WILLIAMS is adding "Bugsy Malone" to his film score credits and has been working with KENNY ASHER on a Broadway musical called "Dorothy."

Biographer portrays Adlai as man of high principles

The book stall

"ADLAI STEVENSON OF ILLINOIS,"
by JOHN BARTLOW MARTON.
(Doubleday, $15)

Adlai Stevenson has been dead more than 10 years now and the current presidential candidates only emphasize what he brought to the political scene.

Wit and humor. Style with a hole in his shoe. And eloquence of a kind that now seems to have been born in a better, more civilized century.

Stevenson was a politician at home in a library, but he also was a highly likable human being — despite his unprepossessing looks, particularly so to women, from Eleanor Roosevelt to Joan Fontaine.

This excellent biography takes Stevenson from his privileged childhood to his defeat in the 1952 presidential election. A second book is planned on his later years.

The emphasis is on his public years as governor of Illinois and his bid for the presidency. Some of the details of his divorce put the matter in better perspective than did the jumbled accounts of the time — and time itself has changed attitudes on divorce itself.

THE 1952 CAMPAIGN provides the book's centerpiece. A relatively obscure governor, a latecomer to politics but highly effective in office, he quickly became a vital part of the national consciousness, inspiring his followers to believe he presented many of the best American virtues.

Martin, a skilled magazine writer who obviously relished his subject and talked to everybody who would answer, asks, "What made his campaign so gloriously memorable to his followers?" In part, the author answers:

"His self-deprecation . . . was a becoming humility to his devotees. His oft-repeated declaration that he would rather lose the election than mislead the people helped create the picture of a man of high principle. His appeal to the intellect, his eloquence, his elevation of the level of political discourse captured the imaginations of academic people and other intellectuals who remained his devoted followers, and the admiration of millions of les-educated people."

THEY SAID of Stevenson's presidential campaigns that he raised the standard of American political life. To read Martin's book will make many wonder if it wasn't Stevenson's, and America's tragedy that he was a man before his time. In this election year, no Adlai Stevenson appears on the horizon to elevate the level of American politics.

"THE REVENGE OF MORIARTY,"
BY JOHN GARDNER
Putnam $8.95

The game is afoot again for A. Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes fans in another Gardner recreation of the diabolical profession and the criminal-world of Victorian London.

Moriarty has devised a clever revenge for his confederates and the Scotland Yard police who foiled his plan to assassinate the Prince of Wales. His unique mind has concocted a scheme that is a challenge, and not at all elementary, to the great detective himself. (UPI)

A devilish thriller

Satan's son returns in 'The Omen'

by GENIE CAMPBELL
(A review)

Flat off — "The Omen" is only for that segment of the movie-going population who felt "The Exorcist" had certain redeeming factors. I happened to have been one of them.

Until exaggerated publicity and overzealous fans ruined its appeal for legitimate movie buffs, "The Exorcist" fit the bill of a creative and technically well-made thriller. In emotional response, anyhow, it scored high. Even so, I for one wasn't afraid Satan was ready to inhabit my soul.

Filling in the gap until "Exorcist II" is ready to be released, "The Omen" combines acceptable acting and direction with a few devilish gimmicks to offer the public yet another scare for its money.

More a hyped-up "Rosemary's Baby" than anything else, the devil's child is planted in an American career diplomat's home where he will have the best chance to grow up pampered, schooled and successful, making it then easier for him to take over the world.

SCREENWRITER David Seltzer dug deep for this one. The story behind "The Omen" is taken from the Book of Revelations which foretells the coming of Armageddon, the final confrontation between the forces of good and evil that supposedly is to be set off by the birth of the son of Satan in the form of a human.

Certain conditions have to be ripe — Jews returning to Zion — a comet ripping the sky — the rising of the Holy Roman Empire which we're told is symbolized by the formation of the European Common Market.

The devil's child rising from the world of politics? Far-fetched? Well, everything else has been rising from politics, so why not Satan's offspring?

Gregory Peck makes a nice foreign diplomat, Robert Thorn, and Lee Remick as his wife shows the strain of raising a little "devil," though neither role is particularly demanding.

BRITISH ACTOR David Warner is a press photographer who stumbles upon a frightening clue only to meet a tragic end himself.

And Billie Whitelaw, nanny to the 5-year-old innocent, arrives from "the agency" and immediately takes over. "Fear not, little one. I'm here to protect you."

Warning the Thorns of the impending doom if they don't destroy the child is Patrick Troughton as the crazed Father Brennan.

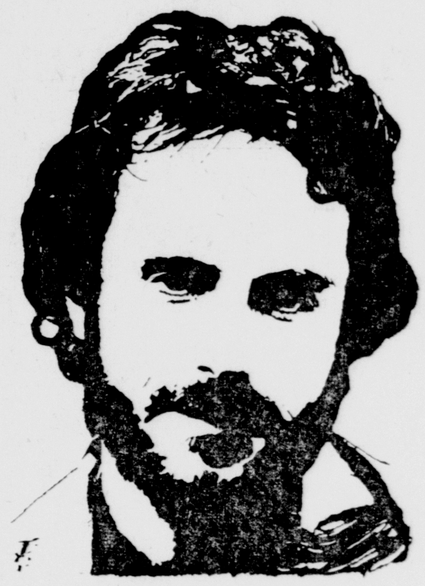

"The Omen" is devoid of the special effects that charged up "The Exorcist," but for chills and thrills there is plenty to watch — gravestone robbing, suicidal hanging and a bloody decapitation. They all lead up to the grand finale: Mrs. Thorn's swan dive from a hospital room at least 10 stories up through the roof of an ambulance. But here's the topper. She lands right on the stretcher.

I WON'T GIVE away any more secrets to the movie, but if the "Exorcist" kept you awake even two nights in a row and you honestly believe the Devil is on his way — don't unnecessarily worry yourself. Just stay home. There are many other shows to consider.

Released by 20th Century-Fox and filmed outside of London, "The Omen" opens today throughout the Chicago area.

IT'S HARD TO BELIEVE this sweet little tyke is actually the son of Satan. He's played by Harvey Stephens in "The Omen," a movie that opens today at area theaters.

M&S awards $500 drama scholarship

Paul Denney, a June graduate of Elk Grove High School, was named by Elk Grove Masque and Staff drama group as the 1976 winner of its annual $500 scholarship award for excellence in theatrical activities.

Paul is the son of John and Mary Denney of Elk Grove Village.

The Masque and Staff award was established in 1968 to show in an appropriate manner its gratitude for continuing community support. Limited to Elk Grove High graduates, it may be used to help defray the cost of college tuition or for any other purpose the winner chooses.

DURING HIS CAREER at Elk Grove, Paul performed in a total of 20 different productions, including two variety shows in which he not only appeared but wrote, produced and directed as well. He also earned special recognition in a sectional drama contest in March 1975.

He was historian for the Elk Grove Chapter of the International Thespian Society and served for three years on the Humanities Board. Other outlets for his writing ability were found in two years on the staff of the school newspaper.

Paul has been accepted as a student at the University of Illinois where he will major in theater.

Other finalists for the Masque and Staff award, which was presented at a recent school drama event, were Greg Harris, Karen Anne Leksander and Bruce Weaver.

ration piece, "The Way of the World," Shakespeare's "Love's Labour Lost" and Arnold Wesker's "The Kitchen."

For those who like to sit on the lawn, where living is easy and a picnic seems like a feast, some good news and some bad. A grass seat costs only about half as much as a spot in the 3000-plus-seat pavilion and the sound system pipes excellent reproduction across the park. However, neither rain, nor sleet, nor — well, snow in July? — shall ever stop the show from going on. So if you are counting on hearing a concert, it could be better to buy a pavilion seat ahead of time. That way you're not stuck at a deadend when the sold-out sign goes up (12 programs already are sold out) and the rain starts to come down.

Coupon books offering a 20 per cent discount on any Ravinia program will be on sale until July 6.

Spending $20 will buy $25 worth of coupons, which may be used for either lawn or reserved admission.

The books are available locally at the Palatine National Bank, Mount Prospect State Bank and the First Arlington National Bank and Northwest Trust and Savings Bank, both in Arlington Heights.

Mozart concert

Caramoor Center's festival opens Saturday with "An Evening of Mozart," conducted by Julius Rudel. The festival will offer a variety of concerts through Aug. 22. (UPI).

Full parking lot registers good food, service inside

There's one quick way to tell if a restaurant is good — the number of diners. Using that as an indicator, The Prime Minister, 3355 N. Milwaukee Ave., Northbrook, is certainly a success.

Reservations are not accepted Saturday nights (they are other nights), and on a recent visit we waited an hour and a half for a table. Other patrons did the same and by 8 p.m. the large bar was filled. Fortunately, owners had enough foresight to include a cheese table in the bar with enough spreads and crackers to quiet growling stomachs.

Atmosphere at The Prime Minister — despite the pretentious name — is informal. Service, however, is far from casual. The night we visited it was excellent.

FOR APPETIZERS we selected the French-baked onion soup, $1.75, and the shrimp de jonghe, $2.60. Both were delicious. The soup comes in a large crock with plenty of cheese. The shrimp was a good-sized portion with plenty of garlic to make it really "de jonghe." Other appetizers on the menu include shrimp scampi, crab legs, snails bourgogne and saganaki.

Each entree includes soup of the day or tomato juice, a salad and choice of potato. The homemade vegetable soup was tasty. The salad was a mixture of crisp greens and little else. However, the waitress leaves the salad bowl and dressings on the table for second helpings.

We sampled the king-size prime rib, $7.95, the peppered tenderloin steak, $6.50, the filet mignon, $8.50, and the dover sole, $7.50. Other entrees include roast duck, lamb chops, pork chops, broiled chicken, baby back ribs, wiener schnitzel and a variety of seafood including a large portion of the shrimp de jonghe.

THE PRIME RIB was a generous portion with good flavor although slightly more done than the medium rare ordered. The filet was also tasty and large. The peppered tenderloin was especially delicious served with crisp vegetables, large pieces of mushroom and wild rice. The dover sole in almondine sauce also received the stamp of approval.

Desserts include cheese cake, fresh-baked pies and chocolate mousse, 95 cents. We selected the mousse which was rich enough for two and resembled a tasty chocolate pudding more than a light mousse.

The Prime Minister, which also serves lunch, has been open nine months and word has obviously gotten around. At 10:30 p.m. the lobby was still crowded with waiting diners.

Sometimes animals suffer

Night out

by Genie Campbell

Gruesome movies are becoming common. And ordinarily I can take all the blood and guts in stride. That is, if only humans are being killed off. Deep down I know even the most realistic looking torture scenes are achieved with trick photography, trained stunt men or any other number of technical secrets of the trade.

But when an animal gets hurt I want to cry. There is no way of knowing for sure whethe or not that animal was actually sacrificed.

The American Humane Association tries to prevent the mistreatment of animals in filming. Yet there are no laws it can enforce.

All it can do is publicize those movies that are unacceptable.

ONE RECENTLY released is "Missouri Breaks," a United Artists film with Marlon Brando and Jack Nicholson. Even before it was out, the movie received heavy criticism when the leading horse was drowned in a river-crossing scene.

"There are a number of other reasons why this film is unacceptable," charges Joseph Hilpert, director of AHA's western regional office. Most criticisms center on gross mistreatment of horses during filming, but in one particular scene an animal is killed on full camera."

Hilpert describes the death scene: "While on horseback, Marlon Brando chases a rabbit, finally impaling it with a peculiar weapon that looks like a four-pronged tire-iron sharpened on each end. He throws it like a boomerang. The iron penetrates the rabbit's back, blood spurts and the rabbit squeals. All this — including the opening of the rabbit's mouth for the squeal — is shown."

"THE DUCHESS and the Dirtwater Fox" worried me at first. George Segal's horse, Black Jack, is one of the stars of the show but several times he takes some rather nasty falls. But it only looks that way. Actually Black Jack is a horse very much in demand. He's been trained how to fall without hurting himself.

Why don't producers use more trained animals in filming? For one thing, there are not enough of them to go around and, besides, the good ones come high. They get more than just horse feed. Unfortunately it is easier and cheaper to buy an old nag and not have to worry over its final fate.

Local ballet talent is promising for Chicago

by LYNN ASINOF
(A review)

There is just enough local talent in the Lyric Opera of Chicago Ballet performance this week to give it a home-grown flavor.

True, the majority of the 30 dancers are imported from the New York City Ballet and include such stellar names as Suzanne Farrell, Jacques d'Amboise and Christine Recpath.

But about a dozen of the dancers, including two soloists, are Chicago trained. And that is more local dance talent than the Windy City has seen in a long time.

The performance Wednesday night gave Chicago a rare look at the choreography and technique that have made George Balanchine and his NYCB giants in the dance world. His full company does not travel to Chicago and his dancers rarely make guest appearances in the area.

THE TIES BETWEEN the Lyric troupe and Balanchine are obvious. Maria Tallchief, director of the ballet and school is a former ballerina with the NYCA and Balanchine's former wife.

For the past two years, Tallchief has been training dancers, slowly developing the makings of a local company. The performance Wednesday showed that the troupe is not quite ready to stand on its own but holds promise.

"Concerto Barocco," one of Balanchine's jewels featured the Lyric Opera ballerina Helene Alexopoulos, 18. Although she lacked the steely edge of a polished dancer, Alexopoulos has the flow of movement needed to make a Balanchine ballet work.

THE PIECE, set to a Bach double violin concerto, weaves an intricate visual line through the point and counter-point of the music. Alexopoulos has a lovely extension and soft expression that give a gentleness to her performance.

Diana White, 15, is the second Lyric dancer featured in the "Little Lyric" performance. A soloist in "The Four Temperaments," White has a good feeling for th eangular and convoluted movements that mark Balanchine's more abstract ballets.

The pas de deux "Meditation" danced by Farrell and d'Amboise showed what the young dancers aspire to become as part of the Balanchine tradition.

FARRELL APPEARED to be a mere wisp which floated on stage to haunt and comfort d'Amboise. The two flowed in and out of each other's movements creating feelings of grief, quiet desperation and solace.

Christine Redpath will dance instead of Farrell in the performances tonight through Sunday. She and d'Amboise will perform excerpts from "Who Cares?" set to Gershwin music.

Performances are at 8 tonight and Saturday and at 7 Sunday at the Civic Theatre, Chicago. Tickets are $10 and $7.50, available at the box office. Further information can be obtained at 346-6111.

DANCERS OF THE Lyric Opera of Chicago Ballet practice under the eye of Maria Tallchief, director. The company will perform this weekend with stars of the New York City Ballet in an all-Ballanchine program.

Special TM topics slated

Two special presentations are scheduled by Northwest Suburban Center for the Transcendental Meditation Program to highlight an eight-week campaign to establish an ideal society.

Each week of the campaign centers on a particular phase of an ideal society.

Next week's focus being on health, a lecture will be given Thursday by Dr. Harold H. Bloomfield, physician, psychiatrist and author, on "Happiness: The Transcendental Meditation Program, Psychiatry and Enlightenment." The 8 p.m. program takes place in Cahn Auditorium at Northwestern University, Evanston.

SPECIAL emphasis will be on edcation the last week in June. That Wednesday (June 30) at 1 p.m., Northwest suburban educators are invited to a program at the Center, 207 S. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights.

Speakers will be Richard Stanowski, director of counseling at Forest View High School, and Laura Aberman, former kindergarten teacher and now a teacher of TM. A color slide show is also featured.

Information on either of the events is available at the Center, 398-7153.

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Cheese does affect lactose intolerant

I am 46. For the past 10 years I have been troubled with nausea, gas and spasm of the stomach. During this period it cost me plenty for specialists, tests and prescriptions. All tests proved negative. I have stopped coffee and cigarettes, but to no avail. I was going crazy for an answer. Every night while watching TV my wife would bring me a saucer of cheese. I love cheese of every commercial kind. An elderly relative told me to stop eating cheese. He claimed that it irritates the stomach lining. That was six months ago. Now I feel terrific. How about a rundown on cheese and its effects. I would think there are thousands of readers who have the same problem with their stomachs.

The probability is that you have intolerance to lactose, milk sugar. Your letter prompts me to emphasize that one of those milk products is cheese. Commercial cheeses contain large amounts of lactose. Individuals who cannot break down the double sugar cannot absorb it and it acts like a chemical laxative. It produses exactly the same kind of symptoms you have described. You can probably tell if this is true or not by your reaction to other milk products.

About two-thirds of the people who have lactose intolerance can't utilize even one glass of milk without having at least minor symptoms. The usual tests of the digestive system, including X rays, will show nothing at all that the doctor can use to make a diagnosis. There are chemical tests which are done to identify people with this problem, but thieir use is not yet that widespread.

The best method of determining whether or not a person has this problem is to eliminate all milk and milk products, including cheese, just as you have done. If the symptoms disappear the problem is usually lactose intolerance.

The dairy industry could use Lact-Aid to form low lactose milk and market cheese, yogurt and products from this milk. The practice of adding dry milk solids to thicken yogurt makes it high in lactose.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 7-2, Milk Products: Good and Bad, to give you a more complete understanding of this problem. Others who want this information may send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, Tex. 78292.

Some time ago you said to protect the face from crow's feet and facial wrinkling, do not smoke. I had always thought this was an old wives' tale. Is there medical evidence for this? I have several friends who would probably stop smoking if this were true.

I wouldn't have said it if it were not so. A study has been made of grading the facial changes in people without knowing which ones smoked or how much. These were then compared to their smoking habits. The results show that cigaret smokers, particularly the heavy smokers, tend to have faces that appeared 10 years older ıan non-smokers. Crow's feet wrinkles were especially apt to be deep and prominent in heavy smokers. So, tell your friends if they want to avoid facial wrinkles that make them appear older, they should stop smoking. Incidentally, the study was published in the Journal of the American Medical Association in recent times. It is quite valid.

Sunlight may remove white sweater stain

Dear Dorothy: Accidentally scorced the elbow of a lovely white acrylic sweater. Have tried spot removers and other solutions on the spot with no luck. Any suggestions? — Ann Lombardi

Since it's acrylic and not wool you ought to try direct sunlight for a starter — either as is, or soaking the spot in warm water, and applying lemon juice and salt. Sun has amazing powers on stains. Handling it indoors, a paste of starch and water dabbed on and left to dry works on some stains. When brushed, the scorch often comes right out. Another way is to dampen the spot with peroxide, put a white cloth over it, and press with a warm iron until the moisture is absorbed. This sometime takes several applications. Try the sun route first.

Dear Dorothy: My daughter keeps a bowl of unshelled nuts on a coffee table, says they stay fresh indefinitely. I always thought nuts had to be stored in refrigerator or freezer if not eaten in reasonably short order. — Mrs. Hazel May Nuts do all right at room temperature for as long as six months. Longer than that, yes, they should get cold storage.

Dear Dorothy: Got a lovely caladium for Mother's Day. How best to take care of it? — Lucinda Browning

This is one plant that should never be put in direct sunlight and the soil should be kept moist. However, never overwater. Caladiums rot easily.

Dear Dorothy: I find that the best way to tell whether whites are properly beaten is to carefully turn the bowl upide down. If the whites do not start to slide out, they're done. — Maryann Towey

Fresh coffee turns freeze-dried

Andy sends the Encyclopedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Doug Arp, 13, of McCaysville, Ga., for his question: HOW IS FREEZE-DRIED COFFEE MADE?

world the day officially begins with the first cup of coffee. In the United States about 415 million cups of this savory brew are consumed each day.

For many people throughout the And the ritual of the "coffee break" has become an established part of the everyday work world. Surprisingly, this favored drink of the American populace is not a product commercially grown in the United States.

Coffee was discovered in ancient times. According to legend, an Arabian goatherd named Kaldi was bemused and bewildered at the antics of his flock after they fed on the berries of a particular evergreen shrub. Whether or not this is true, it was soon discovered that a brew made from these berries indeed had peculiar effects. These effects led to the use of coffee as a food, a wine and a medicine.

Early in its history, it was discovered that coffee had a physiological effect on the human body that could dissipate drowsiness. And from that point on, even though it was outlawed as an intoxicating beverage, its future was bright.

In the early 1600s coffee moved from Arabia into Europe and became an instant hit. Coffee houses sprang up as places where people could meet and enjoy relaxed companionship. At last, coffee was accepted as a drink that could be enjoyed by everyone. The idea that it was a drink brewed by the devil was buried.

Nowadays people can enjoy coffee in many forms. Regular ground coffee is the result of a mixture of coffee beans that have been blended and mixed to produce a coffee with a particular flavor. In addition to the drink brewed from ground coffee beans, there are numerous instant coffees.

Freeze-dried coffee is an instant coffee that is prepared by first making freshly brewed coffee. The liquid coffee undergoes processes whereby most of the liquid portion is removed, and the remaining residues are frozen into solid slabs. These slabs are ground into chunks and passed into special pressurized chambers. The remaining moisture is drawn off in the form of ice crystals, leaving behind the dry coffee crystals that need only hot water to produce a cup of coffee.

The United States ranks as the largest coffeeconsuming country in the world. Each year we use about 2,775,000,000 pounds of coffee. Oddly enough, a little more than 200 years ago, tea, not coffee, lead to a conflict that gave our country its independence.

Lioness' life not as kingly as mate's

by JOAN HANAUER

The African lion is a male chauvinist cat.

That's the view of leonine life on the Serengeti as portrayed on "Jane all and the World of Animal Behavior" in the last of the ABC series, to be aired from 6 to 7 p.m. Sunday.

"Lions of the Serengeti," filmed over a period of several months on the East African plain, focuses on a small pride — two males, four females and 16 cubs.

The fact that zoologist Goodall now is divorced from Hugo van Lawich, producer, director and photographer for the program, may have influenced the show's attitude, but the female lion comes out strongly as leading a dog's life, to mix an animal metaphor.

"The males are more transitory than the females in their relationships," was the way the narrative treated the male lion's fickle nature. The males sleep up to 20 hours a day, while the females hunt. Then the males come along and appropriate the kill.

THE LIONS are territorial, and the males mark their area with a glandular secretion — nature's no trespassing sign.

The lion may be king of the beasts, but even a monarch has a tough time when the dry season comes to the Serengeti. Days go by without a kill and even the most tender-hearted viewer could start rooting for the lions to land a prey.

The females are far better hunters than the males, but even they have their problems. Lions are capable of keeping up with their prey only in short spurts. If the kill isn't quick, the speedier victim may well escape.

Once the kill is made, the lions can't always hold onto it. Males of their own pride may steal the food, or other predators — even a large pack of hyenas — can steal the meal of a small pride.

Six weeks into the dry seaon the cameras return to the pride, to find only eight of the 16 cubs left alive.

NT strain attacks duplicate

Win at bridge

by Oswald and Jim Jacoby

Notrumpitis is not confined to rubber-bridge players. A virulent strain attacks match-point duplicate players as well.

Somehow or other match-point players have found that if they make a lot of tricks at a three-notrump contract, they get a good match-point score even if the notrump contract was a poor one.

Six clubs wheels in and is an easy contract to get to if South just makes his normal response of two clubs to his partner's spade opening. If North and South play in spades the declarer will make 11 tricks.

Nothing like that appealed to South. He wanted to play notrump and started proceedings by responding two diamonds. North rebid his spades whereupon South jumped to three notrump.

If West had led a diamond, South would have been set. But when West opened a heart, South was able to take 11 tricks. He beat all the spade bidders, but still wound up with a poor score. Somehow or other a lot of pairs reached the club slam.

STARS & STRIPES

Number 22 in a series

A FLAG THAT RAISED A NATION

Geographically, Iwo Jima is an unlikely dot of land to be immortalized. Yet atop the island's Mount Surabachi was raised a Stars and Stripes that would speak as eloquently as any, past or future, of the valor of our fighting men and the price Americans are willing to pay to preserve the freedom and dignity of men everywhere.

The battle of Iwo was one of the fiercest our nation ever fought. Three divisions of Marines were pitted against 23,000 Japanese defenders. The first objective was Surabachi, whose 550 foot height commanded the entire island. It took four days to conquer that summit. When it was finally reached an unknown Marine scrambled up the slopes with the colors tied to a Japanese iron pipe to signal others still fighting that this victory had been won. AP photographer, Joe Rosenthal, spotted the six Marines raising the eight-foot flag and took the now-famous photograph.

The fight for Iwo Jima cost more that 4,000 American lives, including three of the six men involved in the Surabachi flag raising. Rosenthal's photograph captured their valor and love for the flag, and thereby the hearts and minds of America.

Guest gardener

by RON PESCHE
of PESCHE'S FLOWERS

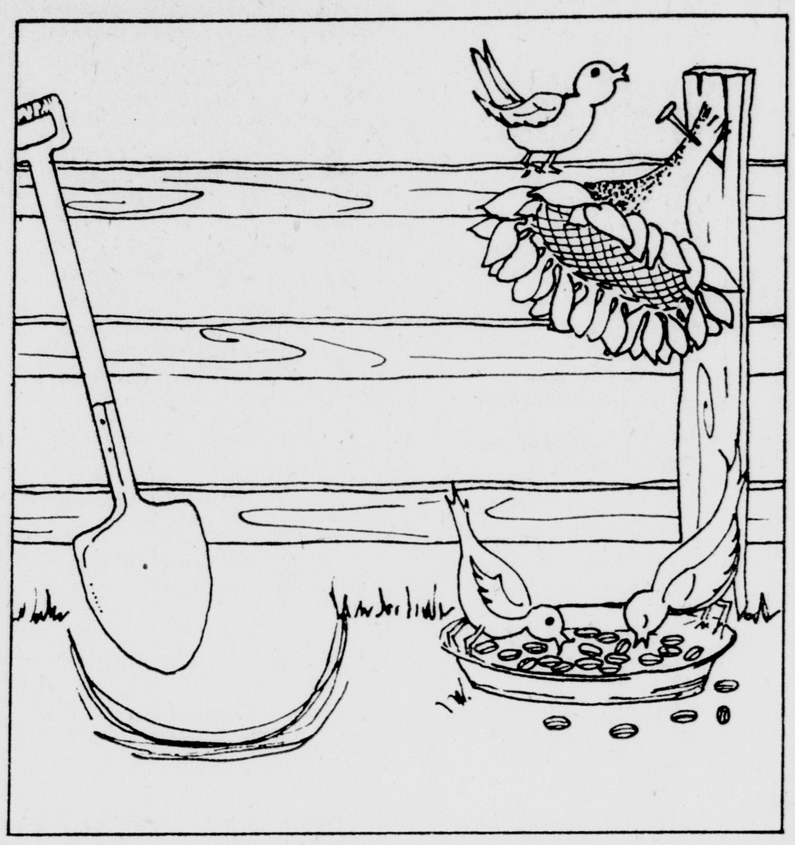

Plants have been grown through the centuries both for decorative purposes and, more importantly, to keep man in touch with his true environment. The world of indoor houseplants is large and varied. There are thousands of plants that are collected from all parts of the world and studied for their characteristics and their adaptability to both the greenhouse or the home.

Not all plants are well suited for homes. Many are fussy regarding the way they are watered, the amount of light they receive, or the lack of humidity in the air. These are the plants that I will not talk about except to warn you abtut them.

There are a few hundred good, solid plants around that even the most novice of indoor gardeners can grow with a little bit of care. It is mainly the novice gardeners I am concerned with, first off, because it was not such a long time ago that I was a novice myself, and secondly because I feel the hardest phase of indoor gardening is just getting started.

If you have a little patience, can take a little bit of time, and do not take it too hard if you lose a few plants in the beginning — you are on your way. No longer will you have to travel to see the world; now you have found a way to bring a bit of the continents into your own living room.

For the romantics you can have Aglaomemas, or commonly called the "Chinese Evergreens" which come from such exotic places as the Philippines, Malaya, Ceylon, Java, Thailand, Perak and Celebes. For the adventurer there is the Agaves, which is collected from the remove hills and sunny valleys of places like the Mediterranean, Mexico, the West Indies, Yucatan and Pachuca. For those of you that would feel safer close to home, you can grow Bromeliads from Florida or Cactus from the southwest or the lush Piggyback plant from Alaska.

Super sunflower fun

by ALLAN and SHEILA SWENSON

Sunflowers have been staging a comeback across America. There's a good reason for it.

More people are realizing that these new super sunflowers are easy to grow, decorative, novel — and good to eat. Perhaps the swing by millions toward health foods has helped the resurgence of sunflowers.

sunflowers are native to America, just like marigolds and zinnias. Way back when, Indians grew them, cooked the seeds and fed seeks, stalks and leaves to their livestock. Today, sunflowers are widely grown commercially in America, Russia, India, China and parts of South America. The seeds are rich in protein and fat. Roasted like peanuts, the seeds are delicious.

Since these plants grow tall, it helps to dig deep before planting. Dig the bed or individual holes 10 to 15 inches deep. Remove soil. Mix one part of this soil with one part compost or dried manure and one part peat moss. Then refill the hole with this enriched mixture and plant the seeds.

Mammouth and Giant Russian are the two tallest types with largest heads. You might even start a super sunflower growing contest on your block. At leat you'll prove your green thumb's prowess when neighbors see those sky high blooms peaking over fences and into second-story windows.

Plants that grow so tall need lots to eat and drink. Add a cupful of 16-8-4 or similar plant food around the hills or along plant rows by mid season. Add another cupful per hill or each three foot of row as blooms form. Be sure to provide at least an inch of water every week.

When heads are fully formed and seeds plump and ripe, you'll get your reward.

Pick the seeds just before they begin to drop in the fall. Cut the heads off and hang to dry over a clean sheet in basement or garage.

Then, place several handsful on cooking baking sheets. Sprinkle cooking oil lightly over them. Add some salt, as you would for popcorn. Bake sunflower seeds in a slow oven, about 300 degrees F., until they seem fully dry.

Now the best part. Snap them open and enjoy the meat, lightly salted to taste. Surplus you can share with the feathered friends that come to call.

Flowers for shady areas

Most annual flowers produce less color when grown in shade. Some species tolerate shade, but become tall and flower poorly.

According to James A. Fizzell, University of Illinois Extension Horticulturist in Cook County, fibrous-rooted or wax begonia, which does well in full sun, is also one of the best annual flowers for shady areas.

The new F-1 hybrids have exceptional vigor and bloom continually throughout the growing season. You can expect color right up until a killing frost in the fall, says Fizzell. The plants are extremely tolerant of wind and rain. Unlike the petunia, which shows the effects of a rain storm for a few days, the new fibrous-rooted begonias will bounce back in a matter of hours.

There is a good selection of varieties. Available are those that produce green or bronze foliage. Flower colors range from white through yellow-green to pink and deep red. Leaf and flower size also vary, some varieties producing large blooms and foliage and others with small flowers and leaves.

Coleus is another good species for shaded as well as bright areas. This plant is known primarily for its foliage. Many new introductions in recent years have established it as one of the better plants for shaded areas, according to Fizzell. The foliage is quite striking and can be used to add contrast to flower borders.

Impatiens, a shade loving garden flower also does well in hanging baskets, and new selections have dwarf growth habits. The Elfin series has exceptional vigor, and plants reach a height of about 12 inches. Growth is uniform, and the plants are covered with flowers throughout the growing season.

Vinca rosea produces some very colorful plants that have exceptional foliage even in shade. The leaves are a rich green and somewhat waxy. While the plant may not produce as many flowers as other annuals, its combination of very colorful blooms and rich, green foliage makes this a suitable addition to the flower border, Fizzell says. Plants will bloom throughout the summer until a killing fall frost.

A number of other annuals will tolerate some shade. Lobelia, with its bright-blue flowers, makes a good border. Snapdragon, calendula, ageratum, and pansy may also be grown in a partial shade condition.

Thatch in bluegrass

Research shows there's a connection between thatch in bluegrass and the absence of earthworms. Scientists don't have all the details, but they know excessive use of insecticides causes thatch. In all tests where thatch builds up, there is an absence of worms.

Do worms feed on the dead clippings and plant surplus to control thatch or are they merely bystanders? Scientists don't know for sure.

But they do know that two applications of chlordane or dieldrin a year caused thatch to appear in two years, while surrounding untreated turf remained free of thatch and seething with worms. The researchers also tested short-lived pesticides like carbaryl and diazinon, applying them twice a year during a three-year study. These pesticides didn't cause thatch and had little influence on numbers of worms in the soil.

Mow your lawn carefully

Proper mowing is the key to a good lawn. A well-cut lawn with a dense, uniform surface improves the aesthetic value of the lawn and also helps in the fight against weeds and disease says James E. Schuster, University of Illinois Extension Horticulturist in DuPage County.

Proper mowing means, cutting at the right height at the right time, and using the right mower.

Proper mowing height for most turf grasses is about two inches. Kentucky bluegrass varieties, red fescue and ryegrass do best if maintained at this level.

Cutting grass too short weakens the plants and increases their susceptibility to disease and insect attack. Also weeds such as crabgrass grow well in short turf.

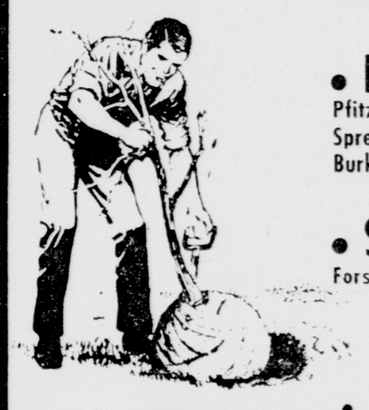

Grass mowed too high looks shaggy and detracts from a lawn's appearance. Mow often enough so that no more than one-third of the grass leaf is removed.

Clippings from a properly mowed lawn should not be collected. They are actually beneficial in providing essential plant nutrients and organic matter to the soil. And, a pile of grass clippings or plastic bag of grass on the curb all weekend definitely detracts from the looks of an otherwise well-kept lawn.

Whether a reel mower or a rotary is used, it should be kept sharp. Reel mowers are more apt to stay sharp all season because they cut by positive shearing action.

Rotary mowers should be sharpened every four hours of running time. If inspection of cut leaves shows the grass is being torn instead of cut, sharpen the mower sooner.

Mowers, particularly rotaries are inherently dangerous. Keep them well sharpened and run them only fast enough to do the job warns Schuster.

Warren' research facilities, established twenty years ago, have under observation over 1,000 strains and species of grasses. Some of these grasses have been patented and are available to the public in various parts of the United States and Europe.
About ten years ago one of these new grasses...
BenSun (A-34)
KENTUCKY BLUEGRASS
. . . was introduced throughout the country. Its performance has proven to be outstanding for these reasons:
- Rated first in shade tolerance (up to 65%) yet grows vigorously in full sunlight.
- Rated first in wear tolerance by a university doing turfgrass research. (Of eighteen top bluegrasses tested, for golf course use, BenSun (A-34) was the only grass to receive an excellent rating.)
- Quick to recover when injured and is used extensively on athletic fields and golf courses.
- Does well in most soils, and is highly drought resistant.
- Thrives in hot or cold climates, at high or low altitudes.
- Requires less fertilizer to keep it healthy.
- Can be mowed down to ½ inch when planted in sunlight.
- One pound of seed will plant 2,000 sq. ft. of new lawn area at a cost of only ⅓¢ per square foot.

NATURE'S GIFTS of living, growing screens help keep distractions outside, pleasure inside your outdoor living spaces. Careful planning of the locations for flowering trees, shrubs, flowers — the American Association of Nurserymen points out — can assure color all through the open living season.

Choose landscape for all seasons

Choose landscape plants that will contribute to a colorful and interesting landscape throughout the year, suggests Floyd Giles, University of Illinois Extension horticulturist.

You can select trees and shrubs which provide color, interesting form and branching patterns and unique textural qualities during every season.

Flowering trees and shrubs add color and fragrance to the landscape, but their display may last only a week or two. Trees and shrubs that produce colorful fruit provide a more lasting display. The fruit also attracts birds and other wildlife to your yard. Trees and shrubs of different bark colors can be used to provide an interesting and fairly permanent color display.

Giles recommends selecting different landscape plants that will produce a variety of green shades through the summer, and show brilliant colors in autumn.

You can also contrast diverse branch forms — slender, flexible twigs and heavy, angular branches. Some trees and shrubs have unusual branching patterns, such as the corkscrew willow's sleek, curvy branches.

Develop unique textural contrasts by planting trees and shrubs that have different kinds of leaves; for example, small, shredded leaves against large, smooth leaves.

Select contrasting bark textures, too. They range from smooth to corky to deeply ridged. The twigs of the winged euonymus have broad-winged structures that become frosted with snow in winter.

Many trees and shrubs have characteristic forms or silhouettes. Some are shaped like columns, some like pyramids, while others are mounded, globe-shaped or irregular. The branching pattern may be horizontal and stratified, weeping or contorted and picturesque.

Remember, however, that environmental conditions may limit the possible selections, Giles says. For example, some trees and shrubs need good soil drainage. Others need well-drained, yet moist soil. And some trees and shrubs are more shade tolerant than others.

To make the best choices, consider an overall plan combining appearance and practicality. By planting a combination of trees and shrubs with different colors, flowers, fruits, textures and shape characteristics, you can develop year-round attractiveness in your home landscape.

Think about planting bush plants

by BILL MEACHEM

One of the greatest bargains in gardening is a planting of one or more of the bush fruits. When most people think of fruits in the garden the first thing that comes to mind are the tree fruits such as apples, cherries, peaches or, in the South, citrus.

But where they can be grown, the bush fruits are not only equally productive for the amount of space they occupy, but they will bear at a younger age and are less troubled by pests and diseases.

Topping my list of bush fruits would be the raspberry. These are shrubs that only grow about four feet tall; a few plants can even do double duty as a small hedge or even background shrub. Raspberries are also fast becoming a gourmet fruit because you see fewer of them in the markets these days. They are not desirable as a commercial crop because they are difficult to ship. The fragile fruit will not stand any abuse at all. But what abuse can they receive when the "shipping" is just from the back yard to the kitchen table?

There are two kinds of raspberries sold today. One gives a single heavy fruiting in the spring and no more. These are great if you are preserving them in one way or another. The second kind would be for the fresh fruit people like myself. These produce two crops during the year — smaller, of course, than the once-a-season kind. But, from a half-dozen plants you can have ample berries for cereal or ice cream topping in both late spring and early fall.

Raspberries will fruit on the canes or stems that grew the previous year. The canes will fruit once and never again. This, then, gives us an indication of how we should prune them. Actually it is not pruning, merely removing the old canes in early spring, allowing only the younger ones to remain and fruit. On the two-crop, the prunning is the same. Be sure to thin them out because the plants can become quite thick. The blueberry is truly a double-duty plant. It is a handsome shrub and even if it didn't fruit it would look nice around the yard. But the fruit is the real bonus. The blueberry may not have as wide a growing range as some other bush fruits because it likes a soil that is acid — or, as some folks say, sour.

You, of course, must know if you are in an area where the soil is naturally acid. But even so you would be wise to plant them correctly to make sure the acid is proper. Dig an extra-large hole for them and mix in plenty of peatmoss. I mean plenty, not just a handful. What you will be doing is creating a miniature acid soil right around the plant. I have even heard of folks out in the Midwest where the soil is alkaline growing acid-loving blueberries in soil prepared in this manner.

As for fertilizing, be sure to use an "acid" fertilizer on blueberries. This may be marked for camellias, rhododendrons or for acid plants. Why the plants want an acid soil could almost be one of those mysteries of plants and their likes and dislikes which I call their personality. You can't change the plant, but you can change the soil.

There are other bush fruits worthy of growing wherever possible. Currants, both black and red, make most excellent jelly. But in some states the sale of certain currants may be restricted because they are the "host" of a disease that attacks the pine trees. So to reduce any threat to the native woodlands, the sale of the fruit is curtailed. Some other bush fruits you may like to try are gooseberry — also for preserving — and the blackberry. Blackberries are grown much the same way as raspberries.

Finally, there are two more fruits that are not exactly "bush" in form but are most highly prized in the home food patch. These are the strawberry and grape. The strawberry is a small plant and the grape, as we all know, is a vine. These plants are more universally grown than some of the others. In future columns I will be discussing each of these fruits individually.

Gardening tips

- Vegetables should be washed quickly and dried thoroughly before storage. Soaking destroys sugars, iron, vitamin C and other nutrients.
- Salt vegetables after cooking. Salting before hand or while they cook draws out moisture and dissolves nutrients.
- Rotating crops help ward off insects and plant diseases. Repeated plantings of the same crop or related vegetables encourage infestations and plant diseases.
- Seeds started indoors should be planted six to eight weeks before you plan to set them in the garden.
- Herbs planted as near the back door as possible make it easy to clip a few whenever they are needed for cooking or salads.
- Whenever possible, pick vegetables as close to mealtime as possible, for maximum flavor.
- Fast-maturing crops planted in the same area as slow-maturing crops makes maximum use of land. The fast crop should be harvested and picked before the slower one is ripe for harvest.

Provide proper plant care

by JANET TARA

Providing proper care for plants does take some time and effort. But knowing the reasons for what you are doing may help develop your patience and determination.

Why bother to drain the excess water into the sink when it seeps through the bottom of the flower pot? Because this rids the soil of toxic salts and minerals that build up from tap water, natural soil changes and the necessary fertilizers that are added. Leaving the water in the saucer to evaporate doesn't do the job. The water containing the salts collects in the dish and rises back up into the pot as the soil dries.

Why give plants a weekly shower, especially since hanging plants are so difficult to move? Not only does this raise the humidity level, but it has indirect benefits. Bugs and diseases are encouraged by dusty, dirty leaves. House plants are not in their natural environment; gentle breezes don't keep the surrounding air moving and rain never washes the leaves. The once-a-week bath is really a necessity, not a luxury, although it calls for gentle handling of plants with long runners and leaves.

You should change a plant's soil approximately every two years whether or not it needs repotting to a bigger container. The earth gets "tired" and many of the nutrients washed away in watering are never replaced, even with fertilizing.

Where do the bugs come from?

by BILL MEACHEM

Just recently I had a frantic call from a reader who had made a terrarium. He had followed the instructions carefully and everything was going well until one morning he found some bugs inside. How come, he asked, can he have bugs when he used packaged sterilized soil? Where did the bugs come form?

But, all the soil in the terrarium was not sterilized! There was some soil around the roots of the plants when he bought them. This very likely was where the insects came from.

Many people feel that plants grown in commercial greenhouses will be completely bug-free. Don't you believe it.

I worked for several years in a commercial greenhouse and it was a constant battle between the grower and the bugs. Spraying, spraying and more spraying was the order of the day — and still the bugs often got ahead of us.

In some specialty commercial greenhouses the concern for insects and plant disease is so great that you have to step into a disinfectant before you can walk into a greenhouse. This is to prevent any pest organisms — insects or diseases — from riding in on your shoes. Yes, this can happen.

To avoid pests there are several steps you can take. The first is to examine the plant carefully before you buy it. Sure, you want a plant that is the right size and shape, but look beyond this. Examine both sides of the leaves for any discoloration or signs that something has been chewing on them.

Then rub your finger along the stem. Green lice are difficult to see and the only way you can know they are there is to feel them. Don't be afraid of the lice; they won't bite you.

Next go to the soil. Scratch it a little and see if you can spot anything crawling around.

Finally, gently tap the plant with the back of your hand and watch for a swarm of tiny flies. If you see any, go to another shop for your plants. This is white fly, a major threat to a number of plants.

If your plant passes the leaf, soil and tap test then you can take a chance. But before you bring it in with your other plants or put it in a terrarium, spray it with an aerosol to be sure.

If you are going to plant the specimen in a terrarium, remove as much of the old soil as possible without damaging the roots. Gentleness is the key. Then plant in your own sterile soil.

A few precautions when you buy and plant can save you a lot of troubles later in the season.

Be careful with fertilizer

Be careful of the amount and type of fertilizer you use on your lawn warns James E. Schuster, Extension horticulturist at the DuPage County Cooperative Extension Service in Wheaton. To avoid serious disease problems, Schuster recommends that only one pound of nitrogen per 1,000 square feet per application be applied and that the frequency of application should be held to a minimum (probably less than four) applications per year. Higher applications and/or frequent applications of fertilizer may help increase the occurrence or severity of disease problems in the home lawn.

If a high nitrogen fertilizer (nitrogen is the first number on a fertilizer bag and if the number is higher than 12 it is getting too high) or if frequent applications of fertilizer is desired, then a preventive fungicide spray program should probably be followed.

In addition to being careful with the type and amount of fertilizer used, other cultural practices will help reduce disease problems. Schuster suggests that a two inch mow height be maintained from the first cut in the spring to the last cut in the fall. Longer grass or short grass causes greater stress and increases the possibility of severe lawn problems. Other practices are never mow if possible when the grass is wet. Mowing wet grass helps to spread disease.

Water before 3 p.m. so the lawn has a chance to dry off before dark. The longer the lawn stays wet, the greater the chance for disease and the greater the severity of the disease problem.

Apply on inch of water per application. Use a coffee can under the sprinkler to determine when you have applied one inch of surface water.

The one inch (or the difference between one inch and the amount of rain received that week) should be applied all in one day but slow enough to avoid run off.

Remove dead grass (thatch) from around the base of the grass plants only if the thatch is a half inch or more. The best time to remove the thatch is in late August. The second best time is in the spring.

Grass clippings need to be collected when one has a thatch problem or has a severe disease problem.

Indications are that frog's eye caused by Fussarium roseum and a serious lawn disease that is increasing greatly in Northeastern Illinois, only occurs on well fertilized lawns, that are well manicured. Therefore, it would probably be a wise idea to reduce the amount of nitrogen used on the lawn and the frequency of application.

Pro bidding war over: NBA-ABA merge

MIKE REID, 22, hands his putter to his caddy after completing first round of U. S. Open Thursday. He shot a three-under-par 67 and is the first amateur in five years to lead the Open. See story on page 2.

Bulls have 1st choice in draft

HYANNIS, Mass. — The National and American Basketball Associations ended their nine-year battle for pro talent Thursday with the merger of four ABA teams into the NBA.

Under the agreement, hammered out in all-night bargaining sessions, the ABA franchises in Denver, San Antonio, Indiana and New York will join the NBA next season at a cost of $3.2 million in cash per franchise.

The new league will consist of 22 teams, broken into four divisions, with one former ABA team in each division. The rosters of the merged ABA teams were frozen as of May 1, 1976, negating draft rights of original NBA teams to players who signed in the other league.

The players from the St. Louis-Utah franchise and from the Kentucky Colonels will join players of other defunct ABA teams in a dispersal draft to be held sometime in the next week. The Bulls, owners of the worst pro record, will pick first and probably take Artis Gilmore, super center for the Kentucky Colonels.

Bulls study choices; See Sports world

ABA Commissioner Dave DeBusschere, who probably will gain a position in the NBA hierarchy, said he was "guaranteed" the ABA teams would not be lumped into a fifth division.

The new divisional alignments will be determined within the next week so schedule maker Eddie Gottlieb can begin preparing a schedule for next season. ABA Players' Assn. lWyer Prentiss Yancey, called into negotiations late Wednesday, said he no longer foresaw a suit on behalf of ABA players from the Utah-St. Louis and Kentucky teams.

The accord was reached after the ABA owners agreed to pay in full the contracts of all ABA players not picked up in the dispersal draft.

Another pending suit filed by the ABA against the NBA apparently was To be dropped after a scheduled Friday hearing before federal Judge Robert L. Carter of the Southern New York District Court.

Carter forced the merger talks by telling both sides they should try to iron out differences before the case came to court. The ABA had filed an anti-trust suit against the NBA charging the older league with a monopoly.

The merger culminates continuing efforts by the ABA to enter the NBA. Five years ago similar talks were held but the NBA advisory committee voted down a merger.

Explaining why the older league changed its mind, New York Knicks' President Michael Burke said "sometimes a girl kisses you and sometimes she doesn't."

Loose ends still must be tied up in the aftermath of the agreement which did not materialize until after 8 a.m. Thursday. There remains the matter of several ABA players, such as Caldwell Jones of Utah-St. Louis, who signed NBA contracts to take effect after their ABA contracts expired.

The official vote of the NBA Board of Governors was 17-1. Seattle owner San Schulman said he voted against the merger because "I didn't like the way the dispersal draft proposal was presented at the last minute. They (O'Brien et al) came in and threw the dispersal plan on the table. The special exceptions for Jones and the other players are going to help New Orleans, Los Angeles and Philadelphia."

Schulman said he was pleased the merger went through because "It's good for basketball."

The ABA side remained unhappy that all six teams were not merged but the NBA was adamant on taking only the four healthiest franchises.

Explaining why the older league changed its mind, New York Knicks' President Michael Burke said "sometimes a girl kisses you and sometimes she doesn't."

To waive or not to waive...

They assembled in good faith as community leaders with community pride.

They responded with enthusiasm when it was learned they could bring the United States Olympic basketball team to the area for a June visit.

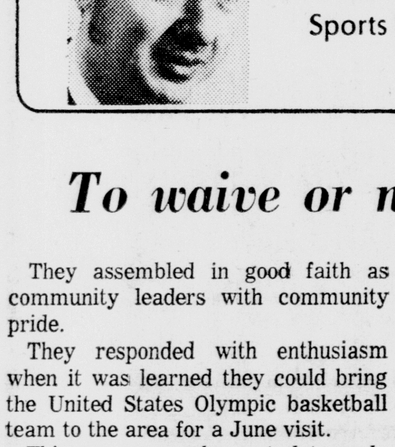

This was a rare chance to let people in these communities get a close look at the Olympians who will try to bring the gold medal back to the U.S.

The Olympic team will be in Mount Prospect at Prospect High School, next Thursday evening to play a formidable group of stars coached by Ray Meyer of DePaul University.

Yes, the show will go on advertised, and it should be a good one, but this entire project has not been without its headaches. If you think professional sports are in a state of chaos, you should try working with some of the amateur groups in this country.

Jack Whisler has tried.

"This has been quite an experience," said Whisler, the area businessman who has been instrumental in bringing the Olympic team to Mount Prospect. "It makes me wonder if we aren't wrong in our entire approach to international competition. There are so many strange rules, so many ironies in thinking."

The real problems have stemmed not from the appearance of the Olympic team itself in Mount Prospect but from the squad that will serve as the opponent. It was hoped, and with good reason, that some Chicago area collegians could be used to face the Olympic team.

The organizers wanted qualified opponents, but they also thought the addition of players with names familiar to Chicago area fans would add some excitement.

"We wanted college players who attended area schools not because of their drawing power but because of the community involvement," said Whisler. "Let's face it. The gym at Prospect doesn't seat that much anyway. But it would have been a great opportunity for a Dave Corzine (Hersey and DePaul) or a Billy McKinney (Zion-Benton and Northwestern) or a Tom Bergen (Prospect and Michigan) to play before the people they know."

What was needed was a waiver from the NCAA. NCAA Constitution 3-9 (c) permits the Council to waive the rule to permit outside participation in official Pan American or Olympic tryouts and competition or participation in other types of international competition.

Loose interpretation of "to participate in official Olympic tryouts and competition" could have been the answer.

Time became a factor. If the waiver had been granted, the organizers for the Mount Prospect game would have had no real headaches assembling a team. DePaul's Meyer and Gene Sullivan, the exhibition game manager, have strong college contacts.

"We called the NCAA and then waited about a week before anyone even responded," said Whisler. "Actually, it's incredible just how confusing it is knowing where to contact anyone in regard to the Olympics.

"We finally changed our request to include only those players who received a waiver for the Olympic tryouts, hoping that would be acceptable. And we waited."

The initial contact was made May 21 and the official refusal came June 10. The NCAA would not budge. They said that participation against the U.S. Olympic team did not constitute official tryouts or international competition, obviously a strict interpretation.

Basically, what the denial emphasized was that if a Russian team, for example, were playing June 24 in Mount Prospect, it would have been OK for college undergraduates Corzine or McKinney or Bergen to play. The waiver would have been granted.

"The logic of being able to prepare the Russian team for competition and not the U.S. team leaves me cold," said Whisler.

The Mount Prospect organizers were asking for a game matching amateurs against amateurs. The NCAA was, in effect, saying it was fine to have professionals play the Olympians (and many of those Olympic players are undergraduates), but it was not proper to have collegians play.

And, incredibly, it would have been proper for high school players to also play against the Olympic team.

"I mean, what kind of system is this?" Whisler asked. "They have a funny way of setting up distinctions. You can bring in high school kids or pros to play against our amateur Olympic team, but you can't use players still in college. Incredible."

Whisler has a good point.

I can understand why the NCAA would hesitate to grant exceptions to rules, but this is the Olympics, not some second-class event, and there could be some help given to people who are trying to showcase the Olympic team in their communities.

The show will go on Thursday evening. Bob Love of the Chicago Bulls has helped assemble a solid group of performers to challenge the Olympians.

The ironies remain, however, and men who just want to put on an interesting show with some area people have learned first-hand about the chaotic world of sports.

Even the most sincere sports enterprise can be bogged down with rules and red tape.

IN A SUCCESSFUL attempt to show how a frustrated golfer must look, Patty Berg runs through her golf clinic in Itasca. Patty's foremost tip to her listeners was, "Ball first, then the turf. Finish high and let it fly, then swing to the finish and hold it." Patty, who was the first president of the Ladies PGA, has won 81 tournaments in her continuing career.

Golfers should listen when Patty Berg talks

by DON FRISKE

A sultry calmness fell over the greens of the Itasca Country Club as the perfect medium for Patty Berg's contagious personality.

It wasn't long before the friendly atmosphere was spreading throughout the course as Patty brought her golf clinic to the club on a warm and quiet afternoon.

Patty has given more golf clinics than any other person in the Orld. She is one of the most gifted and popular golfers to ever play the game and, at 58, she still stuns the crowds with her keen accuracy and knack for perfection.

For 36 years she has worked with the Wilson Sporting Goods Co., giving clinics and teaching others to do the same.

The ingredients are simple. She loves people and golf and the result is a magnetic ability to delight and instruct those who participate in her clinics.

"I guess that makes it a lot easier," Patty said as she wiped the sweat from her forehead following a nine-hole exhibition round with Jackie Schwarz, one of the finest women golfers in Illinois.

Easy or not, Patty's clinics are a success. When she speaks, people listen, especially those interested in improving their game.

She covers just about everything and she does so by using anecdotes, short stories, and a good amount of light humor. But she still manages to cover the weaknesses of any particular golfer in the crowd.

Patty is one who speaks from experience. She helped put together the Ladies PGA in 1948 and she has won 81 tournaments in her career while being a three-time recipient of the Vare Trophy for the lowest stroke average.

"In 1955, my 74.55 stroke average led all women golfess. Now the leading average is around 72, but there are many reasons for this," Patty said. "Today, we know more about the swing and there is better equipment and clothing, especially shoes.

"But the biggest difference is in vitamins and nutrition. People are in better shape today."

Being in shape for tournament play has been a concern of Patty's since she was slowed down by a serious cancer operation in 1971. Tournaments require constant walking and this is the reason Patty has gone back to playing exhibitions after the clinics.

"I have to make sure I do a lot of walking to get back in shape," Patty said. "If I don't walk on the golf course, I walk at night. But I love to walk anyways. That's one

Martin, Parker to face Olympians

Two more basketball standouts have been added to the all-stars who will challenge the United States Olympic team next Thursday evening in the Prospect High School fieldhouse.

Larue Martin of the Portland Trail Blazers, former star at Chicago's Loyola University, and Sonny Parker the 1976 Southwest Conference Player-of-the-Year at Texas A&M, will be performing in the prestigious game.

Martin, a 6-foot-11 center, was the first player drafted by the professionals after his senior year in college. He earned his college reputation by playing on equal terms with Bill Walton of UCLA and Jim Chones of Marquette in publicity glare of the Chicago Stadium.

Parker should provide some crowd-pleasing dunks Thursday. He won the dunking contest in the recent Pizza Hut All-Star game after a sensational college career.

The all-stars, paced by the Chicago Bulls' Bob Love, will hold open practice sessions Monday and Tuesday in Prospect's fieldhouse from 1-3 p.m. and Wednesday from 4-6 p.m.

Other players on the squad that will be coached by Ray Meyer of DePaul University are Mickey Johnson and Cliff Pondexter of the Bulls; Roger Powell of Illinois State, a former Joliet Central All-Stater; Bill Robinzine of the Kansas City Kings, former DePaul University star; Earl King of West Texas St.; and Ron Barrow of Southern University.

The Olympic team will be paced by such All-Americans as Indiana's Scott May and Notre Dame's Adrian Dantley. The U.S. team will fly in on Thursday, staying for only that evening at the Arlington Park Hilton.

Tickets are still available for the contest Thursday that will begin at 8 p.m. in the Prospect fieldhouse. Tickets are $6 and may be purchased at the Mount Prospect State Bank, Busse and Emerson in Mount Prospect.

Amateur leads U.S. Open

DULUTH, Ga. (UPI) — Mike Reid, a Brigham Young University senior whose record is something less than spectacular, shot a three-under-par 67 Thursday and became the first amateur in five years to lead the U.S. Open golf championship.

A first team college All-America last year — but not this year — Reid was the only player to break par on a day that saw many of the "name" pros left far behind and griping about, of all things, the length of the grass in the fairways.

Five players shared second place at 70 even par, including John Mahaffey, the Open runnerup in a playoff last year, and Masters champion Ray Floyd.

Not since Jim Simons led following 54 holes in 1971 had an amateur been in front after any round in the Open.

To do it, Reid birdied three holes in a row midway through his round — the ninth, 10th, and 11th — and then had to survive the treacherous finishing holes on the Atlanta Athletic Club's Highlands course.

Earlier in the hot, muggy day, those holes had killed off the hopes of such prominent pros as Tom Weiskopf (three over for the last two holes), Johnny Miller (three over for the last three), Bobby Nichols (six over for the last six) and Al Geiberger (double bogey at 18).

But the 22-year-old Reid came down the stretch with seven straight pars, just like he had been doing it all his life.

He hasn't really.

The biggest victory of Reid's college career came in last year's Western Athletic Conference title meet, a championship he failed to defend in 1976. He missed the 36-hole cut last year in his first appearance in the Open and in the U.S. Amateur last summer he was eliminated in the first round by a grocery store clerk named Marshall Marraccini from Elizabeth, Pa.

In the group at 70 with Mahaffey and Floyd, who made a bogey on the 460-yard finishing hole, were Geiberger, Rod Funseth, who also bogeyed 18,and Rik Massengale.

Until Reid'as strong finish, the talk of the tournament had been all about grass and lawn mowers.

hale Irwin, the 1974 Open champion and a man who does not know how to lie, started the controversy swirling with his bone honest opinion that the course was "the worst prepared golf course I've ever played for a major championship."

Lou Graham, the defending champion, agreed.

"The fairways were as bad as I've ever played for a U.S. Open," Graham said.

The whole dispute concerned only a quarter-inch of grass, officials saying the fairways were not cut as short as they were supposed to be due to a "misunderstanding."

That may not seem like much — Jack Nicklaus observed that the grass can grow that much, or more, in the course of a day's play — but others like Arnold Palmer and Gary Player agreed with Irwin.

they said it resulted in "flyer" lies-in the fairways, which made it difficult to put any "action" on the ball, and took much of the skill out of the game.

Not surprisingly, however, none of the low scorers saw anything wrong with the course, and perhaps it was Nicklaus, who shot a 74 that included three three-putts and no birdies, who best put the whole thing into perspective.

"The grass was long," he said, "but we all played the same golf course. It's not that big a deal."

Four players were tied at 71, one over, including Don January, the comeback hero of the old folks set. January, 46, won the Tournament of Champions this year. Others at 71 were Butch Baird, a 17-year tour veteran who has not earned exempt status since 1962; 1974 U.S. Amateur champion Jerry Pate, a rookie pro, and Mike Morley.

There was a big group at 72 headed by Player, Hubert, Green, the leading money winner on this year's tour and Ben Crenshaw. Others at that figure were Fuzzy Zoeller, Tom Jenkins, Bob E. Smith, Mike Shea, Randy Glover and Lee Elder.

Weiskopf was at 73, Miller and British Open champ Tom Watson at 74 with Nicklaus, and Palmer, Irwin and Graham at 75.

The field of 150 will be trimmed to the low 60 and ties following the second round on Friday.

The winner of this national championship will receive $42,000, unless it happens to be Reid, or any of the 15 other amateurs in the field. But the odds are strongly against them. No amateur has won since Johnny Goodman in 1933.

Bulls Study choices

The Chicago Bulls, who have the No. 1 choice in the American Basetball Association dispersal draft and probably will get another pick in the second round, don't know which players they favor, Personnel Director Jerry Krause said Thursday.

The Bulls once had National Basektball Association rights to such players as Artis Gilmore, Louis Dampier, Bird Averitt and Maurice Lucas, Krause confirmed, but he said these rights no longer were valid. There was speculation that the Bulls would draft Gillmore, a 7-foot center who played with the Kentucky Colonels, not included in the merger of four ABA teams into the NBA.

But Krause said, "We'll have to look at the entire situation. The ownership is at the NBA meeting and I have not heard from them. When they return, we'll talk about all the ramifications."

Krause said he did not know but assumed there would be 24 players available to draft. The Bulls, who had the poorest record in the NBA last season, will get the first pick, although Krause said he had not been officially informed of that yet. He said the Bulls will probably get another pick in the second round.

"Then teams can pass their draft choice, too," he said, "so there could be several second round picks." Krause added he did not know whether the Bulls could trade the draft choice, and pointed out "there are an awful lot of legal ramifications in the whole situation."

Sayres may become athletic director

Five persons, including former Chicago Bears running back Gayle Sayers, were named Thursday as finalists in the search for a new athletic director for Southern Illinois University. Under consideration besides Sayers are Paul Lambert, SIU's basketball coach; Leo Cahil, former general manager of the Memphis Southmen of the World Football League; Dale Foster, athletic director at the University of Dayton; and Bill Belknap, assistant athletic director at the University of Arizona.

Connors has unwelcomed day off...

NOTTINGHAM, England — Jimmy Connors had an unwelcome day off Thursday when rain washed out the quarter-finals at the $100,000 John Player grass court tennis tournament. With the exception of Ilie Nastase, all Connors' main rivals are out of contention for the $16,000 top prize at Nottingham, so they will be that much fresher when Wimbledon opens next Monday.

Connors, allowing he gets by Dutchman Tom Okker, will have to play two matches today and a possible final on Saturday.

The prospect of further rain — always possible during an English summer — means that the final may have to be postponed until Sunday which would disrupt the first day's program at Wimbledon. Players are guaranteed a day's rest between major tournaments.

...But Evert advances to semis

EASTBOURNE, England — Chris Evert defeated Betty Stove of the Netherlands, 7-5, 6-4, Thursday to reach the semifinals of the $100,000 Colgate tennis tournament, but three other Americans failed to negotiate the quarter-final hurdle.

Evert, who complained earlier in the week that she was winning too easily, got the tough match she desired in this, her first grass court tournament for 11 months. Next week's Wimbledon championship will find her the top seed and even money betting favorite.

Evert's semifinal opponent will be Russia's Olga Morozova, a 6-3, 6-4 winner over Rosie Casals of San Francisco.

The other semifinal will be between Britain's Virginia Wade, the defending champion, and Martina Navratilova, the Czechoslovak defector who now lives in California.

'Jefferson Street' Joe arrested

NASHVILLE — Professional football quarterback "Jefferson Street" Joe Gilliam was arrested on weapons and drug charges Wednesday after being stopped on a routine traffic offense. Gilliam, who was obtained on waivers by the New Orleans Saints from the Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers earlier this week, was clocked traveling 85 miles per hour by a state trooper just west of here on Interstate 40.

Trooper Kevin Horan said the 25-year-old Gilliam, whose father is offensive coach at Tennessee State University, was charged when a search of his car turned up a pistol and drugs — reportedly co-Gilliam was charged with possession of a controlled substance, carrying a weapon and reckless driving.

White Sox keep losing as Hunter stops them, 5-4

From Herald Wire Services

Poor baserunning kept the White Sox from scoring the tying run in the bottom of the eighth inning and the New York Yankees held on for a 5-4 win Thursday night.

It was the seventh straight loss for the White Sox as Catfish Hunter picked up his eighth win against six losses. He got relief help from Sparky Lyle, who earned his 10th save.

With one out in the eighth and Jorge Orta on third, Bucky Dent hit a long drive to right field for the White Sox. Fortunately for the Yankees, Orta must have thought there were two outs as he broke for home.

He made it halfway down the line when he discovered his mistake and had to go back to third. If he had tagged up and then broke for home, Dent would have had a sacrifice fly.

Earlier in the inning the Sox got a break when Yankee first baseman Chris Chambliss threw wild to the plate with the bases loaded, hoping for a forceout. Chet Lemon and Ralph Garr scored to make it 5-4.

Orta, who had reached on a single to load the bases, took third on the Yankee error but, because of his mishap, that was as far as he went.

The Yankess scored two runs in their half of the eighth off Clay Carroll, who had come in to replace starter Terry Forster. Lou Piniella led off with a double and then Sandy Alomar came in to pinch run.

Alomar went to third on a groundout and was followed by Craig Nettles, who was given an intentional walk. Pinch hitter Oscar Gamble picked up an infield single, bringing home Alomar, and Nettles later scored on a groundout to make it 5-2.

The White Sox had a 1-0 lead going into the fourth, when the Yankess tied it with Thurman Munson scoring on a double play which kept the inning from becoming disastrous as the Yankees followed it with two more singles.

In the first inning the Sox scored when Lemon doubled, was sacrificed to third, and came home on a long fly ball.

But the Yankess took the lead for good in the sixth by sending two runners across the plate. These were another gift of the White Sox when three of their fielders converged on a Fran Healy popup, letting the ball fall between them for a double.

Healy then scored on a single by Willie Randolph, who was tagged out at second trying to stretch the hit.

There was a time in the game when Hunter retired 11 Sox in a row before giving up a single with one out in the sixth. It as Hunter's ninth straight victory over the Sox, giving them their longest losing streak in five years.

GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS: Gauging the wind

Paula Shearer captures 'Champions' golf honors

Paula Shearer won the 10th annual Tournament of Champions Golf title earlier this week at Elmhurst Country Club.

Mount Prospect's outstanding golfing resident turned in a 37-38-75 over the testing par 73 layout to defeat 60 other past Illinois tourney champions.

Shearer dominated the Northern Illinois Women's Golf Assn. field. Runner-up Betty Sterner, of Glenview, failed to break 80, shooting an 82.

"It's a very challenging course, but everything seemed to be going my way," said Shearer, who enjoyed her lowest competitive round of 1976. It was the first time she won the event after a runner-up finish in three earlier tries.

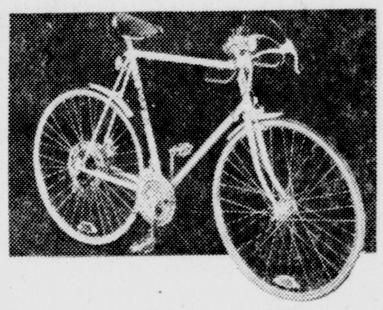

Shearer won the McHenry Invitational last August and is a past two-time champion (1971-72) of the Illinois Women's State Championship. This latter tourney will be hosted by Mauh-Nah-Tee-See Country Club in Rockford next week, beginning on Monday and winding up on Friday.

Shearer teaches at Forest View High School and also coaches girls' golf.

Miller responds to forgetful baseball fans

NEW YORK (UPI) — "There's too much furor over the Oakland A's sale of players to the New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox," is the opinion of Marvin Miller, executive director of the baseball's player association.

Miller, one of the principles invited to a hearing Thursday on the $3 million sale of Oakland players said "I'm afraid people have such short memories and have a terrible tendency to jump to conclusions."

Baseball's staunch labor leader said all the reaction to the sale of the Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers to Boston and Vida Blue to the Yankees relates to the revision in the reserve rule system.

"Let's put things in proper prospective," Miller said. "First of all, there are no free agents involved in the deals. None of the players can declare themselves free agents until the end of the season (Rudi and Fingers are playing without contracts, while Blue is said to have signed a three-year pact with Oakland prior to the sale).

"Second, long before the Andy Messersmith decision or any revision of Rules, experienced baseball people were aware that whole clubs have been dismantled by their owners for cash purposes — not once but several times.

"While those were news stories, you don't get the hysteria you have now."

Referring to the sale of the Philadelphia Athletics Hundred Thousand Dollar infield in the early 1930's, Miller explained: "I think every owner would like to get what Connie Mack received several times. But they like to forget the Yanks of another era who used cash and the Kansas City Ball club as a 'Farm team' to build a dynasty."

Miller hastened to add that a former American League president (Joe Cronin) was sold by Washington to the Red Sox for cash and that Boston sold Babe Ruth to the Yanks in money transaction.

Buffalo Grove has summer youth program

Buffalo Grove High School is starting a summer physical fitness and athletic skills program today.

A visit with Patty Berg

of my hobbies."

When Patty was growing up in Minnesota, she enjoyed playing football but disliked all the bruises that went with it.

"I tore so many clothes and got so many black eyes it was becoming costly for clothing and medical bills. So I decided I had to get into another sport," Patty said.

She tried speed skating for awhile and then decided on golf. Her skill in giving clinics also goes back to her childhood.

"When I first played golf, every Saturday and Sunday that I wasn't playing, my dad had me give some sort of clinic for charity. They were mostly for hospitals," Patty said.

She used to give her clinic six days each week, but that number has dropped to three since the cancer operation. But she still gets the material she uses by continuous reading.

"I'm a great reader," she said. "In other words, I steal. Every night I read for a couple of hours and only some of the things I read pertain to golf."

The other portions of what she covers in a clinic come from the feedback of practicing golfers. At the end of the year, Patty considers what the people want to know.

"I find that 75 per cent of the people, and a lot of good people, sometimes fall into a bad grip," Patty said. "The grip is important because it is a person's only contact with the club and the ball and the game."

Patty is surprised with the knowledge people have about golf, but she said they still have many questions. She carries a 38-page outline around with her during her clinics as a reference for the things she wants to talk about.

Even though there is about an equal amount of men that pay close attention to Patty's golf tips, it is with the women that she holds the greatest rapport.

This is natural, though, because of what she has done for women golfers throughout her career. She was the first president of the LPGA and her battles with Babe Didrikson Zaharias were some of the finest golf matches in the sport's history.

"Babe and I were great friends, but we played in a lot of competition," Patty said. "I remember when we played a 36-hole title match and were tied after the first 18. The , on the 17th hole of the second round, Babe hit the ball in the water and I won the tourney by one shot."

Patty also recalls the time she ruined Babe's birthday as she came from four strokes behind with six holes to play in the Western Open.

Babe worked with Patty in the formation of the LPGA, which started out gradually but, according to Patty, is growing by leaps and bounds now.

"I think it will get bigger and bigger, greater and greater, and better and better," Patty said. "We have a lot of new young players on the tour with a lot of color."

But Patty continues to travel around the country, presenting her vast golf knowledge to newcomers and oldtimers of the game.

PATTY BERG

She still plays about nine tournaments each year and then there is the annual Patty Berg Classic in St. Paul, Minn., which will be held during the third week in August this year.

The key to Patty's success is the continual interest in improving her game while maintaining the skills she already has.

"You have to strive for perfection because in golf you win not through chance, but through preparation," she said.

Mickey Wright, another famous woman golfer, once asked Patty if there was anything she would change in her career.

"I told her I wouldn't change anything because I probably wouldn't be this lucky twice," Patty said.

Readers react to Charlie Finley

Dear Editor:

What's all the commotion about Charlie Finley's selling his best players? It's no big thing and it's not any different from what Connie Mack used to do every 10 years or so when he broke up his pennant-winning Athletics. Actually, the situations were very similar. Mack sold his players because they were costing him too much in salaries. And for a man like Mack — who was field manager, owner and general manager — the challenge of rebuilding was just as exciting as winning a pennant year after year.

I think that the sale of the A's will help baseball, not only because it will increase interest — especially in the American League where it is lagging — but also because when all is said and done, I don't think the acquisitions will help the Yankees and Red Sox that much. Face it, one of those two teams would have probably won the East division anyway, so what's the difference?

BASEBALL'S RUIN?

Fans Forum:

The sale of Joe Rudi, Rollie Fingers and Vida Blue from the A's by owner Charlie Finely has marked the beginning of the end of major league baseball, in my humble opinion. It seems to me that Finley has symbolized the utter frustration of all the major league owners and general managers by selling off his superstars to the highest bidders in a move that was designed simply to avoid paying them an exorbitant salary.

Fans' forum

What will become of those players when they tire of playing for their new employers? Where will they go when they again become dissatisfied with their paychecks?

This development — and the weakening of the reserve clause — will ruin baseball, mark my words. If every player is a free agent and can bargain for its own conditions, they will all end up in New York or Boston where all the money and fame is.

WHERE WERE CUBS, SOX?

Editor:

While everyone else was bartering in the million-dollar range, what were the Cubs and Sox doing? While high-caliber players like Ken Holtzman, Vida Blue, Reggie Smith, and Rollie Fingers were changing uniforms for cash or fringe players, what were the local gurus up to?

They were standing pat, of all things. No trades, no deals. What do the fans of Chicago expect — a pennant? — if the major league teams don't at least take some risks with their money?

In an effort to raise the status of mechanics, members of the service industry, manufacturers and dealers in 1972 founded the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence. Under the institute program, which is voluntary, a mechanic pays a small fee to take all of five tests on different systems of the car. If a mechanic passes any one test he is entitled to wear an orange, white and blue shoulder patch. If he passes all five tests, he qualifies as a certified general automobile mechanic — a master craftsman.

Clinic considers 'human aspect'

by ART MUGALIAN

There's an amazing thing happening at the Randhurst Twin Ice Arena in Mount Prospect this week.

Stan Mikita and his friends are building a dynasty.

Mikita's American Hearing Impaired Hockey Assn. was once everybody's pet charity, the receptacle for people's good will. Newspaper columns lauded the Chicago Black Hawk star for donating his time and effort to such a "worthy cause." Mikita had become a media hero because of his work with disadvantaged deaf kids.

Gee, that Mikita must be a great guy, they said.

The time for lavish praise is over. The time for pity — if there was ever a time for pity — is over. In two short years the AHIHA clinic has surpassed even the most optimistic expectations of its founders.

There is no longer much talk about the wonderful things Mikita has done for the hard-of-hearing. That is taken for granted. So is the marvelous job Mikita has done in rounding up countless present and forme National Hockey League stars to serve as assistant coaches for the clinic, which is being held for the third time all this week at the Mount Prospect facility.

Most of the talk centers around the potential for continued growth in the AHIHA and the opportunity these kids will take away with them when they leave the clinic.

The 63 young hockey players who are in camp this year will form the nucleus of a strong, capable team when the 1979 Deaf Olympics rolls around.

"I think we're looking at the human aspect here more than at hockey," said Mikita. "But this is a darn good team right here."

Mikita sees their chances for success increased not only in hockey but in all phases of life, too.

The man who, with Mikita, founded the AHIHA is Irv Tiahnybik, a Chicago businessman whose son is a deaf hockey player.

"Our purpose is to bring the kids in here and develop their hockey skills, let them have some fun, and maybe change their way of thinking," said Tiahnybik.

"Some of them feel that nobody wants to associate with them," said Tiahnybik. "They have problems but not problems that can't be overcome. We have a motto here at our school: we don't have problems, just solutions."

The AHIHA's main objective is to send these kids home with a little bit of self-confidence and a better chance to play on teams with normal children.

"We want them to be accepted, not rejected," said Tiahnybik.

In that, the clinic has been successful. Already, two of the AHIHA's students have received pro hockey tryouts. Mikita explained some of the other purposes of the program during a break in the clinic earlier this week.

"Our near-range goal is the Deaf Olympics," said Mikita, an 18-year veteran of the Black Hawks. "What we are trying to do is get together a junior team, a team that can compete nationally and internationally.

"Eventually, we'd like to have a team based here in Chicago — a team made up of Chicago area kids," Mikita continued.

So Mikita and his assistants — guys like "Moose" Vasko and Gene Ubriaco — put in long hours with the boys, drilling them in every facet of the game.

"All these guys are great teachers," said Tiahnybik. And to think that some people say hockey players are no good as teachers. Of course, at some hockey schools they bring in an NHL player for a day and that's it. But these guys really work hard."

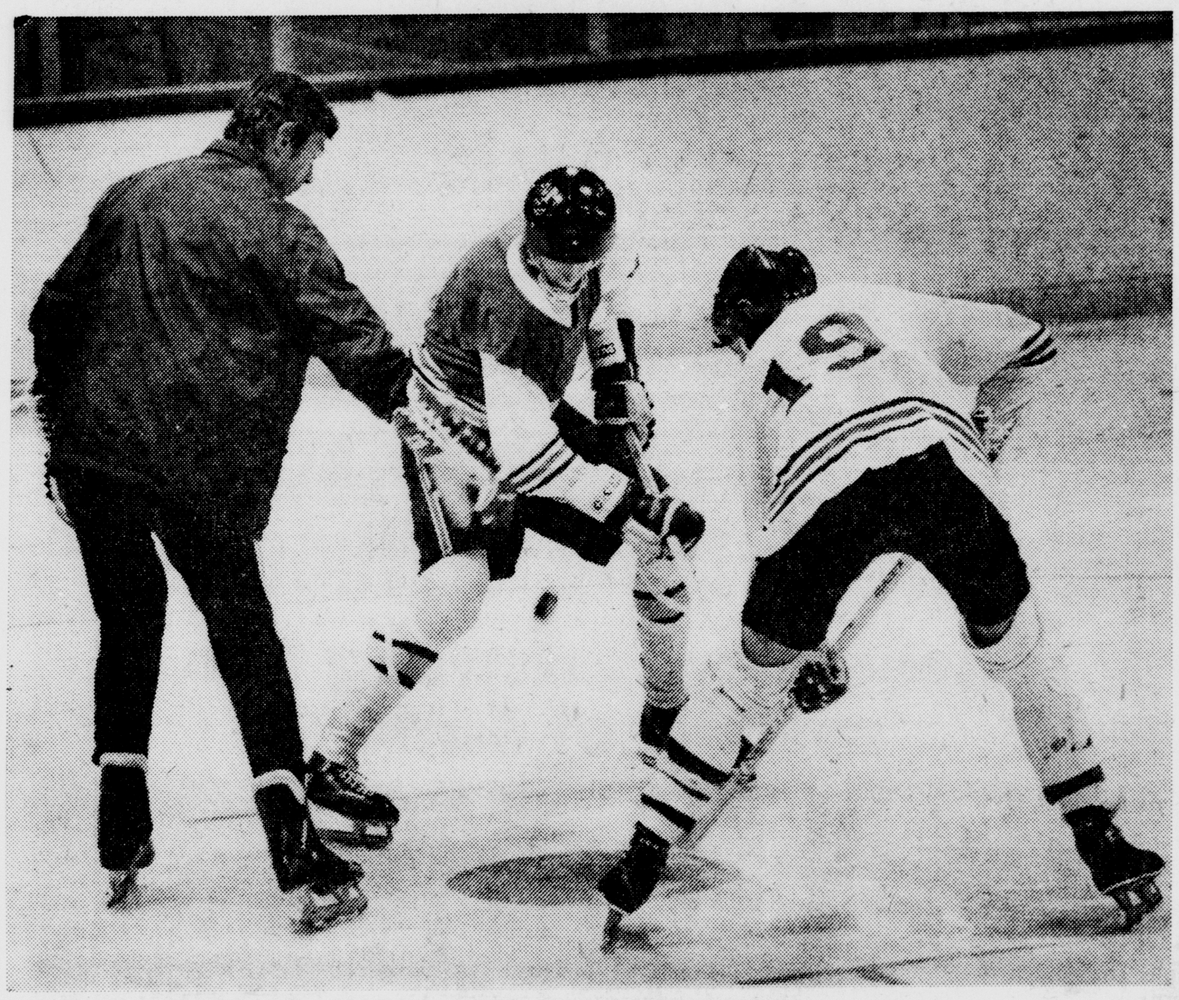

Perhaps the hardest worker in camp is Dr. David Sparks, a researcher in psychoacoustics at the University of Washington and a former college hockey player himself. Sparks takes his turn on the ice as teacher and doubles as the clinic's resident audiologist.

"I'm mainly interested in helping these kids play on normal-hearing hockey teams," said the 29-year-old Sparks.

"There's no reason why they can't," Sparks added matter-of-factly.

"The pro players have surprisingly few problems communicating," Sparks noted. "It's remarkable to see the ability of these untrained hockey players to get their concepts through to the deaf kids."

This week's clinic will climax with a game between the Deaf Olympic Squad and the Mikita All-Stars at 10 a.m. Saturday at Randhurst. The game will be open to the public and a $3 tax deductible admission will be charged.

THE FACE-OFF. Stan Mikita drops the puck and the sticks flash during instructional work at the American Hearing Impaired Hockey Assn.'s clinic for deaf youngsters at the Randhurst Twin Ice Arena, which began Monday and concludes Saturday.

Why of veteran hospital killings goes unanswered

DETROIT (UPI) — Federal prosecutors left the most intriguing question unanswered Thursday in their case against two Filipino nurses charged with poisoning 15 patients at a veterans hospital. Why?

The two women were arrested Wednesday following a nearly year-long investigation into a mysterious series of respiratory failures at the Ann Arbor Veterans Administration Hospital involving over 50 patients, 11 of whom died.

The nurses, Filipina B. Narciso, 30, of Ypsilanti, Mich., and Leonora M. Perez, 31, of Evanston, Ill., were arraigned Thursday on first-degree murder charges in five of the deaths.

They also were charged with 10 counts of administering intravenous injections of a potentially lethal muscle relaxant and one count of conspiracy to commit murder.

Ten of their alleged victims suffered respiratory failure, but lived.

Miss Narciso arrived for her arraignment in Detroit handcuffed but smiling and at one point laughed with a woman FBI agent. Mrs. Perez, a former Ann Arbor resident transferred to the Chicago VA hospital after the series of deaths in Ann Arbor, faced arraignment in Chicago.

U.S. Magistrate Carl B. Sussman set a $500,000 cash bond for Mrs. Perez, waived her right to a removal hearing and orderd her "removed forthwith to the Michigan jurisdiction."

Her attorney, Michael Moran, argued for a lesser bond, citing Mrs. Perez' husband of three years, her son, Christopher, 3, and the fact she is four months pregnant.

Sussman denied a lesser bond because of the "grave charges."

In Detroit, U.S. Magistrate Barbara Hackett ordered Miss Narcisco held without bond on the recommendation of the chief prosecutor, who contended, "The charges contained in the indictment, short of treason, are the most serious in the federal code."

At a news conference in Detroit, Richard Delonis, chief of the U.S.. attorney's criminal division, declined comment on all questions even remotely related to the motive for the crimes. He said it would be "inappropriate to comment on any evidence."

All of the patients who died were elderly, but Delonis would not discuss the possibility their deaths were "mercy killings."

Delonis also refused to disclose whether further arrests were anticipated in the case, but said, "Our major effort at this point is trial preparation."

The prosecutor revealed little background on either defendant, describing them only as citizens of the Philippines who have been in the United States "a matter of a couple of years."

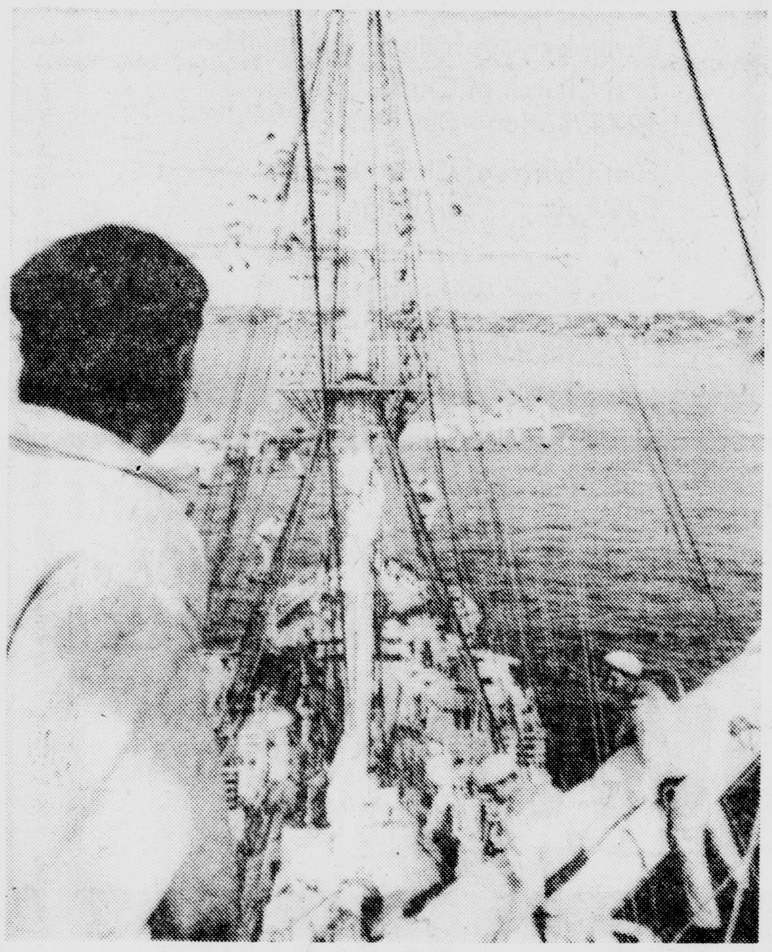

The two nurses worked together at the hospital on the 4 p.m. to midnight shift. Although Mrs. Perez was transferred last summer, both have remained on the job, but in positions where they have no contact with patients.

Delonis said tight controls on access to drugs have been imposed at both hospitals.

Delonis acknowledged that five bodies of former VA hospital patients had been exhumed since the FBI began investigating the month-long series of respiratory failures at the hospital that ended last Aug. 15.

A 30-YEAR OLD nurse at the Ann Arbor, Mich., Veterans Hospital, Filipina B. Narcisco arrives handcuffed at FBI headquarters Thursday to face arraignment in a federal indictment for allegedly poisoning patients and murdering 5 at the hospital in 1975. She and Mrs. Leonora M. Perez were arrested Wednesday following a 10-month investigation into the mass killings at the hospital.

SAILORS SWARM OVER the rigging of the 1,505-ton Russian ship "Tovarisch" as it sails through the Two Rock passage in the Port of Hamilton, Bermuda. The Tovarisch, winner of the first two legs of the Tall Ships race, is one of the favorites for the last lap of their Atlantic crossing — Bermuda to the U.S. — starting Sunday.

Reforms in the way House conducts itself proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — First-term House members, fearing a backlash from the congressional sex scandal, proposed reforms Thursday in the way the House conducts itself — including a grievance procedure for any more Elizabeth Rays on the payroll.

"We don't want to see these decent good members go down the drain," said Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., expressing concern that freshmen congressmen, with tenuous claims to the loyalties of constituents, may take most of the punishment at the polls for loose congressional morality.

A task force of the 81 new Democratic members of the House proa 23-point reform program which would strip Rep. Wayne Hays' House Administration Committee of its power to increase members' fringe benefits without a vote of the House.

One of the reforms would establish an ombudsman or a grievance panel where employes of congressmen who feel abused by their bosses could take complaints for a hearing.

In related developments:

• Rep. Joe D. Waggonner Jr., D-La., 57, said his arrest last winter by a policewoman posing as a prostitute was "an effort — I now realize — to entrap me." Scripps-Howard Newspapers said Waggonner offered $50 to a policewoman on a Washington street Jan. 20, but was released from custody with no record of the incident made when he identified himself as a congressman.

• Rep. Allan Howe, D-Utah, was expected to announce in Salt Lake City soon whether he would withdraw as a candidate for a second term. He was arrested last week by two policewomen posing as prostitutes.

• Six members of the House who are also clergymen said in interviews they felt condemnation of Congress as a whole arising from the sex scandals was unjustified.

Rep. Jerome Ambro, D-N.Y., chairman of the "Freshman Caucus," said the new members would press for adoption of their reform proposals this year.

Under the proposals, an independent citizens commission would be created to study the way Congress handles its internal matters and pays its bills.

Another recommendation would take away the limousines provided congressional leaders at public expense.

4 area residents named to health agency board

Four Northwest suburban residents recently were elected to the board of directors of the Suburban Cook County-DuPage County Health Systems Agency.

They are: Mary Mollica Forkin, Des Plaines homemaker; Virginia Hayter, Hoffman Estates village president; Vernon Laubenstein, Schaumburg Township supervisor; and Robert Grossman, Schaumburg director of public health.

The Suburban Cook County-DuPage County Health Systems Agency is one of two groups that has applied to receive broad powers of comprehensive health planning from the U. S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare.

If approved, the board will have the authority to control the expansion, relocation or construction of hospitals and nursing homes, and the purchase of new medical equipment.

It will coordinate existing health-care services, make adjustments where services and facilities are poorly distributed and judge future health needs in suburban Cook and DuPage counties.

Two other Northwest suburban residents have been serving on the board of directors since December. They are State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights; and the Rev. Leon A. Haring, minister at the First Presbyterian Church, Arlington Heights.

HEW has received applications from two competing groups for health planning responsibilities. It is expected to name the group for this area July 1.

National energy plan forum topic

The Energy Research and Development Administration, leading federal agency for energy research and development, will hold a special two-day public meeting at the Palmer House in Chicago Monday and Tuesday.

Citizens, businessmen, government officials and public interest groups are invited to speak out on the nation's energy plan.

Scheduled speakers include Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley; Robert Seamans, ERDA administrator; and representatives from nine Midwest states.

Monday's program includes a general discussion of ERDA's energy plan, conservation measures, nuclear energy and an evening session on solar and advanced energy systems.

Tuesday's session will focus on coal and synthetic fuels, biological and environmental risks of energy technology, and the role of the public and industry in putting new energy technology to work.

Saturday program for disabled slated

A six-week Saturday recreation program for trainable mentally handicapped and multiply handicapped children will begin June 26 sponsored by the Northwest Special Recreation Assn.

The program, at the Kirk Center, 520 S. Plum Grove Rd., Palatine, will feature arts aand crafts, music, motor and gym activities and swimming in a heated pool.

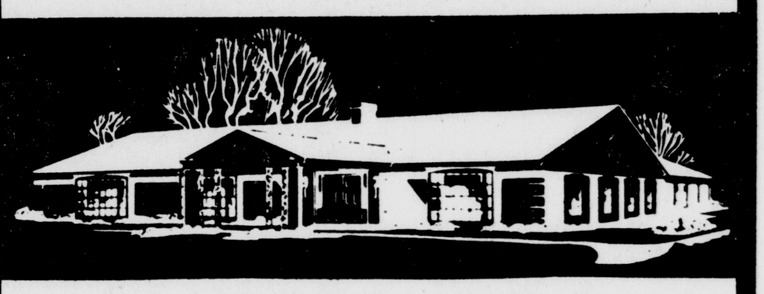

The staff will include a physical therapist and therapeutic recreation workers.

For registration and more information, call the association at 394-4948 or 394-4910.

Competitive pay, convenience

Municipal jobs—they have their advantages

A Herald staff report

The pay is competitive, the hours and benefits are good — for thousands of local residents a municipal job close to home is an ideal situation.

Personnel managers in several Northwest suburban communities say there are far more applicants than available jobs, not only because of the high unemployment rate in the Chicago area but because a government job is convenient and secure.

"At some point people decide they just don't want to take the train down to the Loop anymore," said Greg Ford, personnel manger for Arlington Heights, where more than 330 persons are employed.

FORD SAID most applicants for village jobs have some work experience and are looking for something better. For the tradesman, it may be security.

"Even though they make a higher hourly salary working as a union journeyman they may work 10 to 12 different jobs a year. If they work for a small contractor they may not always get their pay on time. They may just be tired of long-distance driving or not knowing where they'll work next," Ford said.

Ford said Arlington Heights salaries are competitive with local business.

"We're reasonably competitive — especially with the type of fringe benefits we have to offer," he said. And in areas where salary may fall short, the distance factor may make the difference.

SALARIES IN the Northwet suburbs for the same job classification are generally within hundreds of dollars of each other.

The starting salary for general maintenance positions in public works departments ranges from $9,961 in Rolling Meadows to $11,401 in Des Plaines, with other communities falling somewhere in the middle.

The average fireman will start at a salary between $11,700 and $14,400. Policemen fare about the same.

Municipal office help, including clerk-typists and secretaries, are paid as well, if not better, than they would be in the private sector.

CLERK-TYPISTS will earn in the neighborhood of $7,000 to start with secretaries averaging $8,000 or more.

Glenn Sheets, owner of Sheets Employment Service, with offices in Des Plaines and Arlington Heights, estimated the starting salary in this area for a clerk-typist at $5,460 to $6,240 a year, while a secretary with no experience can expect to start at $5,980 to $6,500.

Salaries improve with experience, but Sheets said "$12,000 is about as high as they go" and that would be for an executive secretary/administrative assistant.

The top salary for a secretary in Arlington Heights is $10,600 a year. In Hoffman Estates, an administrative secretary can earn as much as $12,360. Maximum for Elk Grove Village secretaries is $12,024. Other communities are in the same range.

LOCAL MUNICIPAL jobs also are competitive with federal government salaries. John Nieminski, area manager of the Chicago araa office of the U.S. Civil Service Commission said clerk-typists begin at $6,296 and receive $7,102 after a year. Secretaries start at $7,976.

Policemen working for the federal government have a salary range of $8,925 to $11,046. Nieminski said positions that used to be filled by lower paid guards now require better trained security policemen "because of all the riots and bombings and such.

Tradesmen working at the federal level are paid wages "based on the prevailing wages in the community," Nieminski said. "An electrician in the Chicago area would get what an electrician in the Chicago area receives." Surveys are conducted annually to determine salary levels.

Entrance salaries for administrative, technical and professional levels in the federal government range from $8,925 to $11,046 and top pay runs about $22,900.

FEDERAL EMPLOYES are paid according to a civil service grading scale which sets minimum and maximum salaries for a person's experience and/or education. The top grade, GS 18, is a Cabinet level job which pays $48,000.

In local government, the top salary generally goes to the village or city manager, with Arlington Heights Village Mgr. Rudy Hanson leading the list at $42,500.

One problem in working for a municipal government is that employes receive salary increases according to the municipality's ability to pay. Wheeling gave no raises to employes for the 1976-77 fiscal year and has refused to negotiate with its unionized employes because of a lack of funds.

Daniel Larson, Buffalo Grove village manager, said raises don't follow a steady pattern because they reflect the village's ability to pay and that pay hasn't really kept up with the cost of living. Buffalo Grove employes received a 4 per cent increase for the 1976-77 fiscal year.

But, money is not everything and for many employes, particularly those who have spent years with their municipality, there are other reasons to stay.

"I enjoy working for a municipality because it's very interesting and no two days are ever alike," said June Boston, Palatine's deputy clerk and a 22-year employe. "I suppose I could make more money in the private sector with all my experience, but it wouldn't be worth it now," said the $13,100-a-year employe.
